WLB Formula Attacked

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

United Mine Worker Chieftain John L. Lewis yesterday laid down the gauntlet for a showdown struggle to smash Government wage ceilings by demanding a $2-a-day wage increase for 500,000 soft coal miners.

Bitterly attacking the War Labor Board's "Little Steel" formula as a violation of labor's no-strike agreement with the Government and asserting that "inflation is already here," Lewis disclosed the demands which were formally approved at a meeting of the U. M. W. policy committee in the afternoon.

Wage negotiations with the bituminous coal operators to renew present contracts are scheduled to start in New York City on March 14. Contracts expire on April 1.

Additional 90,000

Wage demands for an additional 90,000 hard coal miners will be formulated at a meeting of the Anthracite Tri-District Council at a date still to be scheduled, Lewis said. Observers believed that the anthracite miners, some of whom recently participated in a 12-day strike against union dues and existing wages, would ask for at least the same $2 a day if not $3 a day, since their wages are lower than those paid bituminous miners.

Earlier yesterday, A. F. L. President William Green and C. I. O. President Philip Murray visited the White House and informed President Roosevelt that organized labor was dissatisfied with efforts to hold down the cost of living and that the "Little Steel" formula was regarded as "too rigid and inflexible."

The two labor chiefs asked the President to apply "universal price ceilings and rationing to check worker dissatisfaction with rising living costs" and "stationary" wages. Green and Murray said they went to the White House in response to an invitation to discuss conditions on the "home front."

Getting Out of Bounds

"The cost of living is getting out of bounds," Green said, "and we cannot stabilize wages unless we stabilize the cost of living."

Lewis told reporters that the soft-coal miners "would owe the Government 2 or 3 per cent" if the "Little Steel" formula were applied to them, with the hard-coal

New Coffee Ration To Be a Pound For Six Weeks

A reduction in the amount of coffee each person may obtain in the next ration period, beginning February 8 was announced by the Office of Price Administration yesterday.

Instead of one pound a person for five weeks, the next stamp, No. 25 in war ration book No. 1, will be good for one pound for six weeks. Stamps in the rear of book No. 1, originally issued for sugar rationing, now are used for coffee rationing.

Stamp No. 25 will become valid February 8, and will be good for the purchase of one pound of coffee through midnight, March 21. Stamp 28, valid since January 4, expires at midnight February 7.

The action was made necessary, the agency said, by reduced coffee inventories in the hands of wholesalers and retailers. The increase in military requirements for shipping, and the necessity for maintaining imports of strategic war materials, were said to be responsible "in part" for the reduced inventories.

Scientists Isolate Paralysis Virus

Both Swedish and American scientists at last have isolated and photographed the virus which causes infantile paralysis, G. B. Lal, International News Science editor, wrote from New York last night.

The isolation of the virus, possible prelude to work which may lead to the discovery of a vaccine against the disease, was hailed as a "noteworthy contribution" to its control by the director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Officer Clubs Told to Stop Selling Liquor

New York, Feb. 3 (INS).—All United States Army officers' clubs as well as Army canteens and post exchanges are to be "dry" from now on.

War Department Circular No. 29, dated January 25, 1943, and signed by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, contains notice that sale of anything stronger than 3.2 per cent "near" beer is forbidden "upon any premises used for military purposes by the United States."

Previously similar regulations, established by law, had been applied to Army posts, canteens, etc., but officers' clubs had been permitted to dispense stronger drinks. (Some said it was done on the theory that the liquor belonged to the officers and was not being sold.)

This practice must now be abandoned, according to General Marshall's circular, which has been distributed throughout the United States to all military establishments.

The circular calls attention to the Congressional Act of February 2, 1901, forbidding the sale of any intoxicating liquor in any post exchange, canteen or Army transport or upon any premises used for military purposes; and to the subsequent act of March 22, 1933, specifying that any drinks containing "not more than 3.2 per cent of alcohol" would be considered "non-intoxicating."

General Marshall's circular advises all Army posts that those provisions will be enforced not only with regard to Army exchanges, canteens, transports, but officers' clubs and messes as well.

It also states that 3.2 per cent beer may be sold on Army posts unless a State law in the State in which the military premises are located prohibits such sale throughout that State.

Executive Branch Faces House Inquiry

Rules Group Orders Probe as Warnings Of Waste Are Voiced

By Cecil B. Dickson
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

A sweeping investigation into any executive branch of Government, including actions of President Roosevelt, to ascertain whether power or authority granted by the Constitution and Congress had been exceeded, was ordered yesterday by the House Rules Committee.

While Administration followers are opposed to the investigation, Democratic leaders conceded that conservative members of their party in a powerful coalition with the newly strengthened Republican minority, would secure approval of it by an overwhelming majority of the House.

The action came as Congress was warned by Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat) of Indiana and Senator Walter F. George (Democrat) of Georgia that the country is up in arms over the "waste and extravagences" of Government bureaucrats.

"The people," Ludlow told the House in opening debate on the $1,202,007,320 Treasury-Postoffice Supply Bill, "have an intense desire to see Congress impose effective curbs on our overgrown and vigorous bureaucracy which is becoming too dominant a force in our national life, and which is threatening to stifle free enterprise."

More Men Available

The Office of Civilian Supply has informed the War Manpower Commission that 2.8 million workers may be squeezed out of industry without interfering with essential activities, it was learned yesterday.

This advice was given as a preliminary to the preparation of a list of "nondeferable" activities which WMC issued Tuesday as one means of supplying the 6.4 million additional persons needed in the war labor force this year.

The list slated for extension in the near future eventually will include most if not all of the activities which Civilian Supply believes have more than minimum essential amounts of labor.

Surplus Manpower

The civilian activities which are now operating substantially above "bedrock" levels and therefore possess surplus manpower include activities varying from toy manufacturing, and book publishing to furniture manufacturing and china ware.

In extending the list of "nondeferable" jobs, Civilian Supply has suggested that WMC classify activities in the three following categories:

1. Industries where some key men are essential to its basic operation and could easily remain deferred, with all others made nondeferable.

2. Industries which are presently performing useful services which might be allowed to retain men with dependents for a limited period.

3. Industries which should be made nondeferable at once.

WMC's already issued list of nondeferable jobs was transmitted to Selective Service boards with instructions to cancel all deferments of men holding these jobs by April 1 regardless of dependency unless they changed to more essential activities. Provision was made for a 30-day extension of the order for those draft eligibles (18 through 37 only) who registered for another job with the United States Employ-

Sulfathiazole Found One-Day Cure for Impetigo

Chicago, Feb. 3 (AP).—Discovery that very fine crystals of sulfathiazole provide a one-day cure for contagious impetigo, a pus-forming skin infection, was announced today in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. T. M. Harris of Philadelphia reported the treatment. He said its effectiveness is due entirely to the fineness of the powder, which is prepared by reducing ordinary sulfathiazole crystals to minute particles, called microcrystals.

When used as a dressing the powder concentrates on the surface of the gauze in about the consistency of fresh mud and is merely placed in contact with the skin lesion.

"Upon removal of the dressing 24 hours later the lesion was always found to be healed," Dr. Harris said.

Proof of the Horse Meat

Choice Cut of 'Porterhorse' Proves Not Bad—If You Like It

Read what Walter Haight writes about horsemeat, on page 10.

By Mary Spargo

Horsemeat, on sale here for human consumption for the first time in history, is a little dryer, possibly tougher, but apparently only slightly different in taste from beef.

Because of the great public interest in horsemeat, with Washington's supply of meat only one-third of normal, I was assigned to purchase and cook a couple of choice cuts of Dobbin's oest.

Edging my way into the Table Supply Store at 2007 Fourteenth Street Northwest, I purchased 2 pounds, 10 ounces of "porterhorse" at 33 cents a pound. At the same time I bought a little round "filly" steak at 29 cents a pound, which, as beef, would have cost 55 cents.

The "porterhorse" I cooked just as any porterhouse would be cooked. I learned one thing. Although horsemeat is taken from wild horses corralled and fattened up on corn, it is leaner than beef and doesn't brown so quickly, hence you are apt to cook it too long. However, the gentlemen who ate it came back for more.

I cooked the round filly meat as "Swiss steak," using the usual recipe which included long simmering, and seasoning with mustard, onions and a trace of garlic. This was much the tenderer and seemed to be even more pleasing to the official tasters.

Accompanied by French fried potatoes, French fried onions, sliced tomatoes, and a variety of condiments from chutney sauce to English mustard, the steak disappeared rapidly. One of the guests had three servings, but both declared that unless they had been warned in advance they would not have known they were not eating beef.

Approximately 250 pounds of the horsemeat was sold on Tuesday, the first day it was placed on sale, and it was reported that business was equally brisk yesterday.

Problems Multiply

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Pending their first meeting with Beardsley Ruml today, members of the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday disclosed outlines of a new plan to soften the blow of pay-as-you-go tax collections for millions of citizens by assessing a part of their debt to the Government at the lower rates of a year ago.

This, it was emphasized by committee members and Treasury officials, would not leave any citizen paying less than he now expects to pay on March 15 and June 15. Instead, it would be calculated to "forgive" the Nation's income tax payers between three and four billions, compared with 10 billions under the Ruml plan, and seven to eight billions under the compromise of Representative Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia.

Ten Per Cent Forgiveness

As one member outlined the effect of the proposal, the individual taxpayer in the lower brackets would be forgiven an estimated average of 10 per cent of his tax on 1942 income. The remaining 90 per cent of the tax, under a second portion of the plan, would be collected over a three-year period. This collection would be made in addition to the Treasury-proposed pay-as-you-earn program, under which 20 per cent of income over basic exemptions would be withheld from pay envelopes and salaries of some 27 million persons after July 1.

Worthy of Study

Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina offered the suggestion for computing 1942 taxes at the 1941 rates and forgiving the taxes for the new taxpayers brought into the income tax setup

Foe May Try Escape by Sea; Reds 30 Miles From Don City

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 3.—Soviet forces have captured an area only 22 miles north of Kursk, German stronghold in southern Russia and tonight were on the verge of trapping a huge Nazi army in the Caucasus below Rostov after closing one end of a land escape corridor, and they may be moving as well to block a Nazi retreat by sea.

[The International News Service said the Russians, within 30 miles of Rostov at their closest point, were steadily driving nearer that city.]

The capture of Kupyansk, important rail junction only 63 miles southeast of Kharkov, Ukraine capital, also was announced in a special Russian communique recorded by the Soviet radio Monitor here.

Reuters reported recording a Moscow broadcast saying Soviet warships and naval airmen of the Black Sea fleet were battering German transports between the Taman Peninsula and the Crimea, suggesting that the Nazis were undertaking a "Dunkerque" evacuation of their own.

Escape By Sea Hinted

The Berlin radio tonight hinted for the first time that the Nazis might be about to try to escape by sea. A DNB dispatch recorded by the Associated Press said the Nazis had taken up positions at "two large bridgeheads," one east of the Taman Peninsula opposite the Kerch Straits, and the other "covering the southern and eastern part of the Don estuary" around Rostov.

British military observers said the fall of Rostov appeared inevitable but added that the Nazis were capable of making a strong stand around the city with 250,000 troops estimated to be there.

Another Junction Seized

As for the Taman Peninsula to the south they said there were some indications that the Germans already were fleeing across the Kerch Straits to the Crimea.

Russia's announced occupation of Zolotukhino, 22 miles above Kursk, severed the railway between that

Tank Crews Dig-In

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Feb. 3.—American tank crews today were dug in astride the railway 1 mile east of Sened and 47 miles from the coast in central Tunisia, where their wedge poised a new threat to the lifeline of Marshal Erwin Rommel.

From the east the British Eighth Army based on the Nile continued its 8-mile-a-day advance since taking Tripoli and was reported in contact with the Rommel rear guard at Pisidia, only 12 miles from the Tunisian frontier, after passing through Zelten.

Although the American column of medium and light tanks and armored half-tracks scored an unexpected success by taking Sened yesterday and remained to establish a strong spearhead in the position during what had been scheduled as a mere raid, Allied headquarters frankly acknowledged a lack of the necessary punch farther north where the Germans still held strong positions in Faid Pass.

German units were said to be strongly entrenched there, 70 miles northwest of Sfax and 50 miles north of Sened, and the Allied communique said two days of attacks by American forces there had been unsuccessful. Allied spokesmen described the position as a "place of tremendous importance."

"German artillery probably outranged our own," a spokesman said, and the action was reported broken off.

The Germans captured the pass over the weekend in a 6-mile

Rescued By Air After Five Days On Two Life Rafts

By Charles McMurtry
Associated Press Staff Writer

Advance South Pacific Base, Feb. 3.—The rescue of Brig. Gen. N. F. Twining, Col. Glen C. Jamison and 13 others after six nights and five days adrift on two small life rafts in the Coral Sea was disclosed today by the Thirteenth Air Force.

All were taken to a hospital for treatment for exposure and severe sunburned faces, hands and ankles.

General Twining and the party were on a combat mission in a heavy bomber when forced down at 10:29 p. m., January 26. They were unable to land because of severe weather and flew 4½ hours until they were out of gasoline. The plane sank in 32 seconds.

Harmon Led Search

All 15 crowded into two six-man rubber life rafts, which were lashed together. They were able to take from the plane only 1½ canteens of water, one chocolate bar and a small can of sardines. They caught a little rain water and shot two albatross, which helped their water and food situation some.

Lieut. Gen. Millard F. Harmon of Washington, D. C., commanding general of the Army air and ground forces in the South Pacific, personally led the aerial

4 Pilots Tell How President Followed Flight by Landmarks

By Roland Nicholson
Post Staff Writer

The story of a sea-loving Chief Executive who turned out to be "as much at home on the flight deck of an airship as on the bridge of a warship" was related yesterday by the four pilots who flew President Roosevelt and his party more than 15,000 miles on the historic journey to and from the Casablanca conference.

Smiling and calmly confident, the two airmen who had the "high honor" and great responsibility of flying the President told how they were unaware, until the very moment that Mr. Roosevelt stepped aboard their plane, of who or what their "cargo" was to be; and of how their sense of responsibility was made bearable, and even pleasant, by the sense of ease which the President felt and communicated to the crews.

The two pilots were Capt. Howard M. Cone, jr., master of ocean flying boats, who skippered the giant Pan-American Clipper which carried the President from Miami to Trinidad, thence to Belem, Brazil, and, on an overnight hop, to Bathhurst on the coast of Africa; from Bathhurst back to Natal, Brazil, and from Trinidad to Miami.

And Capt. Otis F. Bryan, of 1204 North Inglewood Street, Arlington, Va., chief pilot for TWA, whose converted C-54 land plane, which he stressed was not a Stratoliner as reported by some sources, picked the President up at Bathhurst, flew him to Casablanca, then to Marrakech in south Morocco, back to Bathhurst, over to Marshall, Liberia, back again to Bathhurst, and from Natal to Trinidad.

The other two pilots, who flew corresponding type ships carrying secret service men and other members of the party, were Capt. Richard W. Vinal, master of ocean flying boats for Pan-American, and Capt. Don Terry of T. W. A., who has more than two million air miles to his credit.

Captains Cone and Bryan said the trip in its entirety was made in favorable weather conditions; that no enemy planes were sighted and that there were no operational difficulties. Questions as to what fighter plane escort, if any, was provided, and whether the huge airliners were armed, were ruled out by officials who supervised the press conference in the Pentagon Building, where the airmen were interviewed.

Cone told how he initiated the President, with the aid of Harry Hopkins, into the "short snorters club"—a rite which cost Mr. Roosevelt six dollars, and of how the President, on a short side tour, directed the pilot to the famed Citadel on Haiti. Although he had a chart with him, Cone said the Chief Executive found the Citadel from landmarks alone, and also pointed out pack trails and the like far below. "His knowledge of geography was very impressive," the pilot declared.

The President evinced great interest in the African coast country,

Time and Place Reported Fixed To Strike Hitler in Europe

By Philip G. Reed
International News Service Staff Writer

The time and place to strike Hitler to the heart in Europe this year were "pretty well settled" at Casablanca, President Roosevelt informed members of the Pacific War Council yesterday.

Concrete plans also were said to have been laid at the momentous meeting with Prime Minister Churchill for military and naval action in the Pacific as the United Nations sweep forward to the quickest possible victory over all members of the Axis.

The Nation's Commander in Chief, "more optimistic than he has ever been" on the outcome of the war, presented the council with "a survey of the whole of the discussions between himself and the Prime Minister and what they have both done since."

New Zealand's Minister Walter Nash, in his customary role of spokesman after the White House conference, described the meeting as one of the most interesting held by the council since it was formed shortly after Pearl Harbor.

And every other one of the conferees, obviously heartened and encouraged by Mr. Roosevelt's comprehensive report, echoed the President's own optimism.

Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, told reporters that "programs for everywhere" worked out at Casablanca had been discussed with the council by the Chief Executive.

Leighton McCarthy, Canadian member of the council, revealed that Mr. Roosevelt had "surveyed the possibilities of attack" and definitely assured the councilors that necessary plans have been made.

Chinese Ambassador Wei Tao-Ming said he was "very encouraged" over the report from the President on decisions reached at Casablanca for a concerted offen-

A Sparring Round

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Aerial and naval engagements between American and Japanese forces are continuing in the Solomons, the Navy announced last night, as indications grew that the greatest sea battle of the war may be developing.

A Navy spokesman said that "numerous task forces are sparring for position" and that there have been "widespread attacks by both sides." So far, he made plain, there has been no "compact fleet action" or joined battle between the powerful opposing forces, but rather a series of engagements.

Like "Open Football"

The brief official communique said only that air and surface engagements are continuing and added that "the military situation does not permit publication of further details at this time."

Elaborating on this terse announcement, the Navy spokesman said current operations were "like open football" with forces scattered over a wide area and most of the attacks in the air.

"It's safe to say that the Japs are trying their best to take Guadalcanal," he added.

Regarding the losses suffered in the surface and air engagements thus far, the spokesman said that the Navy Department has some information it believes accurate on the toll taken of the opposing forces.

Troops Gain

"But the policy is that until we can make a simultaneous announcement of losses on both sides we will have to hold off on this," he continued.

Naval officials said there was no indication that the Japs are using aircraft carriers in the fighting so far. Enemy planes involved are

Eisenhower Hits Anti-Ally Talk, Slovenly Dress

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Feb. 3 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in a memorandum to his staff saying that "we are fighting a tough war and everything we do must be directed toward winning that war," today warned he would not tolerate irresponsible talk against the Allies, excessive drinking, slovenly dress and disorderly barracks.

He said the appearance and carriage of the troops was a problem more for the American Army than the British, "since it is a matter that I consider more a national than an Allied thing."

"All officers must be made to understand that in unwarranted criticism of any Ally we are simply playing into the hands of the Axis," the general declared.

Spain Denies Part In Nazi Peace Move

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 3 (AP).—The Spanish Embassy issued an official note tonight denying that Adolf Hitler was planning a peace offer through the Spanish government of Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

The Spanish government's denial that it had been approached "to formulate" a peace offer in behalf of Hitler came as a surprise, since roundabout reports and rumors that such a move might be made had received no prominence whatever. The denial was studied closely for hidden significance.

Tojo Feared 1st Attacks Would Fail

By the Associated Press

A Tokyo broadcast last night quoted Premier Hideki Tojo as telling the Japanese House of Peers "I felt cold water run down my back" when a Japanese convoy en route to Malaya was detected two days before the attack on Pearl Harbor, and that he "did not have confidence" then in Japan's opening campaigns.

Tojo said Japan went to war against the United States and Britain because of the "impolite attitude of the American Government."

He told the peers "I was deeply concerned with the operations in Burma, Malaya, Sumatra, Java . . . as to how much success we would attain. If the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor and the landing operation at Malaya should have failed, what would have been the outcome? At that time, I did not have confidence in these campaigns.

"To give you an example, a great mass of our landing units sent to the Malaya Peninsula were discovered by the enemy on December 6 (December 5 in the United States). I felt cold water run down my back. Then I felt that the war would surely break out by December 7. I was greatly in doubt as to whether the landing operations in Malaya would succeed."

French Guerrillas Active

London, Feb. 3 (AP).—Heightened guerilla activity throughout France against German occupation forces and collaborationists was reported in underground newspapers received today by the Fighting French.

These incidents within recent weeks were listed:

A time bomb at Nice wrecked local headquarters of Jacques Doriot's Nationalist Party. This was the fifteenth of his headquarters blasted since November 1.

A train carrying German soldiers was derailed outside Compiegne.

At Orleans, grenades fired coal requisitioned by the Germans.

At Moutiers, two large water pipes were wrecked by saboteurs. These pipes fed turbines of a system which provided current to manufacturing works in the district.

4200 More Serbs Slain

London, Feb. 3 (AP).—The Yugoslav government-in-exile declared today that the Germans had killed 4200 Serbs in Belgrade alone during a recent three-day reign of terror and cited numerous instances in which men were reported tortured and women assaulted before they were killed.

The Gestapo's attack was aimed at supporters of Gen. Draja Mihailovic, Yugoslav Minister of War, Navy and Air Forces who leads a guerilla army against Axis occupational forces.

The Yugoslav statement said a Serbian police officer, Major Kalebtich, was stripped of his clothing, rolled back and forth across a street littered with broken glass and finally shot for refusing to carry out German orders to execute Serb civilians.

The statement asserted that the Italian governor of Montenegro recently stated in a private conversation that 823,000 Serbs had been executed since the country was first occupied.

'Absentee Jews Face Death

200 Tons of Bombs Blanket Great Industrial City

By Alfred E. Wall
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 3.—R. A. F. bombers dealt a sharp, swift and heavy blow to Cologne last night to nullify the feverish repair work the Germans had accomplished there among the U-boat equipment plants hit in the first 1000-plane attack eight months ago.

A hundred 2-ton blockbusters and thousands of incendiaries were dropped in less than 20 minutes in the powerful blow made in behalf of the Allied Battle of the Atlantic, for in the words of an authoritative announcement many of Cologne's great factories were engaged in work connected with the submarine campaign.

The Diesels, which drive the U-boats on the surface and the batteries for which the engines generate electric power for undersea operations, are produced in Cologne.

The R. A. F. acknowledged the loss of five planes out of probably more than a hundred attacking, but the Germans, admitting casualties and destruction, claimed only three British planes were downed.

The Cologne raiders had hardly returned when a procession of daylight raiders swarmed over the Channel, flying in the general direction of Calais.

Yanks Participate

Ventura Bombers, escorted by Spitfire Squadrons, some of which were from the American Air Force, swept over Abbeville and St. Omer, bombing railways and an airfield. Two bombers and eight fighters were lost, but the fighters destroyed three enemy planes.

The object of the 112th attack on battered Cologne was, as one commentator put it, to "make sure the blitzed city stays blitzed."

The Germans are known to have taken great pains to repair the hundreds of Cologne factories, of which 250 were damaged in the big raid of last May 20.

Last night's 200-ton raid, plus incendiary showers, was called a normal heavy assault which now has become R. A. F. routine.

One pilot said so many bombs were bursting together that he could not tell which were his own.

Carpet of Incendiaries

"There was a carpet of incendiaries below us," said another.

Most crews described the anti-aircraft fire as moderate and said night fighters were up.

Since the first thousand-bomber raid last May, when 600 acres of the town and industrial suburbs were devastated, many plants had been reroofed and small factories repaired, the air ministry news service said.

However, the large rubber works in the Deutz district was so wrecked that it was easier to rebuild elsewhere.

For their part the Germans sent four Focke-Wulfs over the rooftops of an inland town in southeastern England in daylight and inflicted numerous casualties and considerable destruction in a shopping center.

German raiders appeared over the northeast coast of England tonight and dropped flares and incendiaries. They were met by extremely heavy antiaircraft fire.

The Deutschland sender and the German-controlled Calais radio went off the air at 8:48 tonight, indicating the British might be out raiding again.

coming from land bases in the upper Solomons, it was said.

The Navy communique also reported further gains by American troops driving westward on Guadalcanal. Our forces ashore crossed the Bonegi River, which is only a half mile east of the Jap strong point at Tassafaronga, 10 miles west of Henderson Field. "Stiff" enemy resistance was met in the advance and 60 Japs were killed.

Earlier in the day, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox told reporters that we "completely dominate" the island now.

Commenting on the current sea and air fighting in the Solomons, he denied that a "great, big fight" for control of the area was under way.

"What is going on down there is a process of feeling out on both sides," he said at a press conference. "A lot of preliminary dispositions have been going on, but no pitched battle of any kind has started as yet."

Could Be Indication

He added that there were "indications of activity" on both sides which might precede a general engagement and then might not." Talk of major action was pure speculation, the Secretary said.

Reporters then called his attention to the Navy's communique of Tuesday night which said in part:

"During the last several days there have been a number of surface and air actions between United States and Japanese forces in the Solomons Islands.

"The increased activity on the part of the Japanese indicates a major effort to regain control of the entire Solomons area."

Knox studied the text and then said that the official announcement was "probably misleading." He declared that instead of using the word "indicates," it might have been better to say that the increased activity "could be an indication of a major Jap effort.

Other usually informed sources, however, were convinced that the Japs had launched a powerful drive aimed at recapturing Guadalcanal and said that powerful American naval and air forces had moved into action determined to stop them.

They said that while the heavy forces of the opposing fleets had not joined in a pitched battle, the "air and surface engagements" which have taken place to date were by no means minor brushes. Unless one side or the other breaks off action and withdraws, it seems clear, they state, that a showdown struggle is developing.

Secretary Knox told reporters about his recent trip through the Pacific during which he visited Guadalcanal. (Last week in Hawaii, he told reporters that enemy resistance on Guadalcanal probably would end within a month and predicted that the Japs would make no more attempts to recapture the island.)

He said yesterday that "it seems that organized resistance has been cleared up" on Guadalcanal, and declared that American troops were surrounding pockets of Japs and wiping them out.

The text of the Navy communique, No. 270, follows:

"South Pacific: (All dates are East Longitude)

"1. On February 1, United States ground forces on Guadalcanal continued their advance to the west and crossed the Bonegi River, one-half mile east of Tassafaronga. Stiff enemy resistance was encountered and 60 Japanese were killed.

"2. Air and surface engagements between United States and enemy forces in the Guadalcanal area of the Solomon Islands are continuing. The military situation does not permit publication of further details at this time."

thrust through French positions toward Sidi Bouzid, but were stopped when the Americans went to the aid of their Allies.

A French communique declared "our forces made progress" in the southwest of the Djebet Serdj region, a range of hills 7 miles north of Ousseltia.

Lively activity in the mountains between Ousseltia and Kairouan also was reported, and the French said "a German attack carried out by one battalion led to reclassification of the front in our favor."

In the Faid region the front was quiet, but patrols were active, French headquarters added.

Sfax, the supply port which the pass protects, was the scene of heavy destruction yesterday, however, when B-25 Mitchells and B-26 Marauders, twin-motored bombers, escorted by P-38 Lightnings, cascaded bombs all over the airdromes, blew up a huge munitions dump and left fires which were visible for 30 miles.

At least 14 Axis planes were destroyed during the day, 12 of them when bombs burst among parked aircraft at Sfax, while the Allies counted a loss of 13 of their own machines.

Other Mitchells, Lightnings and P-40 Warhawks searched the sea between Tunisia and Sicily, bombed a munitions depot near Faid Pass and strafed German tanks, while Allied planes from the Middle East bombed barges off the Tunisia coast and attacked an airdrome at Crotone, in Sicily.

Delayed dispatches from the Sened front said the Americans went into action early yesterday in a mountain-rimmed valley and in a surprise march of 20 miles in an hour blasted open the German defenses with a sledgehammer blow in the afternoon.

Some prisoners and a quantity of supplies were captured and five of the enemy's tanks knocked out.

Although the Americans were reported yesterday to have withdrawn after a surprise raid, the column was said to be firmly settled astride the railway that runs from Gafsa to Mahares on the coast.

They were only about 23 miles from Maknassy, where a thrust would seriously endanger the line of communications between Rommel, drawing up behind the Mareth line in southern Tunisia, and Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim, defending Tunis and Bizerte.

Presumably referring to the Faid area, German broadcasts admitted that Allied attacks had broken into Axis positions there, but said the breach had been closed.

French spokesmen said heavy losses had been inflicted on the Germans in the two-day battle there.

9 Freed in Death Of Admiral Darlan

Algiers, Feb. 5 (INS).—Algerian civil authorities this afternoon unconditionally released nine men arrested in the Christmas Eve assassination of Admiral Jean Francois Darlan, high commissioner of French North and West Africa.

Two others are under house arrest and three still are in custody "awaiting inquiry."

Giraud Promises Liberation of All Frenchmen

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Feb. 3.—Gen. Henri Giraud, high commissioner for French Africa, made his first radio appeal to the people of France tonight, asking them to be patient and have confidence in Allied victory, while his government announced announced the release of nine persons, mostly Jews, who were arrested following the assassination of Admiral Jean Darlan. He pledged early deliverance to all France.

There were informed reports that the imperial council once ruled by Darlan and now by Giraud was due to be shaken up. Its members met throughou the day and will meet again tomorrow.

One report said Gen. Auguste Nogues, Moroccan governor, was to be retired; others circulated that Marcel Peyrouton, former Vichy ambassador to Argentina who succeeded Gen. Yves Chatel as governor general of Algeria, would replace Gen. Jean Marie Bergeret as second in command in North Africa.

Giraud's broadcast to France was seen as a first step in a campaign to gather a following for his administration similar to that De Gaulle enjoys. Meanwhile, a unity settlement between Giraud and De Gaulle appeared to be no nearer a solution.

Among the persons released following a roundup of suspects in the assassination of Darlan were three prominent Jewish followers of De Gaulle. They were Henri Aboulker; his son, Jose, and he phew, Dr. Raphael Aboulker. Another was Dr. Fernand Moralli, a 56-year-old Jewish republican who has been in ill health for some time.

Two other persons still are under house arrest and three are in jail. Those in custody include a highly-placed government official under Darlan who has a brother high in the De Gaulle ranks, and a priest.

Giraud Setup Is Not Permanent, Eden Says

London, Feb. 3 (INS).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, denying today that there was any difference of opinion between the British and American governments over the North African political situation, defined the French high commissariat there as merely an administration, not a government.

Defending the present political setup in North Africa before the House of Commons, Eden declared that the organization headed by French High Commissioner Gen. Henri Honore Giraud is "not a French government, nor a provisional, nor even a prospective government; it is merely an administration for the time being, responsible for certain parts of the French Empire."

Eden denied that the British and American governments disagreed regarding the administration of North and West Africa, but admitted that "there are divisions of opinion in this country and the United States, and we are perfectly entitled to hold our different viewpoints."

"All I ask the House," he said, "is to give the arrangement the best chance to work."

Britons Hail Churchill's Moves As Discomfiting to Germans

Sudden Visits Provide Grist For Cartoonists

By E. C. Daniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 3.—The British haven't grinned so much since Neville Chamberlain flew home from Munich with the heartening but riddled hope of peace in our time.

Confident that big events are sure to come from Winston Churchill's missions abroad, they are plainly amused at the consternation they believe his vanishing and reappearing act is causing the uneasy Germans.

The new national guessing game is "Where will he turn up next?" The butt of most jokes is Franz von Papen, who hastened back to Ankara from a skiing trip when he heard Churchill had turned up in the territory Von Papen is supposed to watch over as Hitler's Ambassador to Turkey.

It is supposed that Von Papen will be called upon the Hitlerian carpet, or what's left of it.

One newspaper cartoonist pictured Churchill in a pith helmet and shorts being greeted by a native under a palm tree with the words: "Massa Churchill, I presume?"

Another, in the Daily Mail, showed Hitler eyeing a long, black cigar on the floor and saying to Gestapo Chief Himmler: "Don't stand there saying 'He certainly gets around.' Do something."

The Star's cartoon showed Hitler with his sleeves rolled up and cane in hand, welcoming a quavering Von Papen to Germany with the words, "Come on in, my dear Von Papen."

Meanwhile, Churchill last was reported in Cairo in conversations with King Farouk and Richard E. Casey, Minister for Britain to the Middle East, and the German radio was still angling for his itinerary, quoting Madrid reports that he was due in Portugal which, like Turkey, is a British ally, though neutral.

Neutral correspondents abroad reported Berlin was nervous and London newspapers like the Express noted the German comment on Churchill's tour was less bombastic than usual and "more actual and realistic."

The British delight over German discomfiture was stepped up when the R. A. F. dropped in unexpectedly on Goering's Nazi party in Berlin last Saturday, and it has increased since.

There are such contrasts to dote upon as Von Papen skiing pleasantly in Turkey while the British Ambassador, Sir Hughe Knachtbull-Hugessen, set out ostentatiously in hunting disguise and turned up purposefully at the Adana conference attended by Churchill and other high British and Turkish officials.

Hanfstaengl Accuses Hitler Of Murdering His Own Niece

By Pierre J. Huss
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Feb. 3.—Grim accusations that Adolf Hitler murdered in cold fury the woman he loved were laid before the world today by Ernst "Putzi" Hanfstaengl, Hitler's erstwhile confidential adviser.

Breaking a self-imposed silence after escape from Naziland and internment in Canada, Hanfstaengl tears the mask off Hitler's private life in the March issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine, just published. He brands Der Fuehrer a neurotic and ruthless lover without remorse, equally quick to plot in hatred or kill followers and enemies alike.

Now in Washington

This is a summation of the Hitler pictured by Hanfstaengl, who is now in Washington as a special adviser to the United States Government on anti-Nazi psychological warfare:

1. Smoking pistol in hand, this wild-eyed madman of Nazidom put an end to his beautiful young niece, Geli, because she fell in love with a handsome young Jew from Vienna and thereupon deserted Hitler.

2. After the abortive 1932 putsch in Munich, Hitler started to blow his brains out, but the gun was jerked out of his hand by Hanfstaengl's American wife.

3. He made primitive love to women he called "My sunshine" or "My golden one," deeply susceptible to the accompanying piano playing of his 6-foot friend Putzi.

4. Hitler's eccentricity takes the form of brutal satisfaction in humilitating the object of his desires, of those he hates, and this abnormality is the "key to the whole brutal Nazi system."

5. As a sadistic taskmaster of a sadistic political machine, Hitler disliked and resented personal and party criticism, and plotted revenge against those who—like Hanfstaengl—opposed him.

Mad Infatuation

Putzi tells of the mad infatuation Hitler had in 1928 for 23-year-old Geli, on whom he showered furs and jewels. Hanfstaengl quotes a Nazi official as complaining that gossip was rife in party ranks.

Hanfstaengl then adds: "I as half incredulous, but some months later I encountered Hitler and Geli in a Munich theater. She was stunningly dressed. Even Hitler was 'duded' up though he still carried his usual dogwhip. His eyes had the look of a lovesick suitor. When he saw me, a curtain dropped over the moon-calf look. He was instantly the stern Nazi Fuehrer."

Putzi asserts that he saw Geli for the last time at the Nazi Brown House in Munich in 1931, when she told him she was taking music lessons from a new Viennese teacher.

Termed Suicide

"Not long afterward she died from a pistol bullet, in Hitler's house," Hanfstaengl adds. "The power of the Nazi Party was swiftly exerted; the story, minimized, was given out as 'suicide.' Hitler and Geli had quarreled that much I soon learned. Geli's new singing teacher was a handsome young Viennese—a Jew, and she had fallen in love with him. Hitler had discovered this. On the day she wanted to leave Hitler's house, she died.

"Geli died by a bullet from Adolf Hitler's revolver. Afterward, Hitler in sudden panic sent for Hermann Goering and Gregory Strasser, a party leader. Soon after they arrived Strasser left, grim-faced. Hitler's hatred of him dated from that moment; Strasser had refused to call it an accident."

But as Putzi points out, remorse did not bother Hitler for long after the danger of arrest for murder passed. Soon he wooed Henny Hoffmann, daughter of hunchbacked Nazi photographer Heinrich Hoffmann.

"At Goebbels' house sometime later I saw another of Hitler's 'sunshine girls.' This was a young actress we shall call Miss Schmidt—one of the first of a long line from stage and screen, served up to Hitler by the club-footed doctor. Hitler asked me to play for him, then withdrew to a secluded corner with the girl.

"In his twisted subconscious mind, Hitler was back in his mother's arms, comforted, protected against a world he found too harsh. An oedipus complex?"

His final parting with der Fuehrer was in keeping with the inner deviltry of that fanatic. According to Hanfstaengl, he was simply summoned to the chancellory in Berlin in 1937 to play the piano.

"Play your funeral march," Hitler said, referring to the mournful Hanfstaengl composition adopted by the Nazis some years earlier. Hanfstaengl adds: "Hitler stood with his grim eyes fixed on me until the last chord. 'That's all, Herr Hanfstaengl.' He turned and left. It was the last time I ever played for him."

Reich Mourns Loss of Army At Stalingrad

By Carl C. Cranmer
Associated Press Staff Writer

Germany acknowledged yesterday that the battle for Stalingrad had ended after more than five months and the Reich went into four days of mourning for the German Sixth Army which "has succumbed" in the siege that backfired.

Dolefully admitting for the first time in this war the loss of an entire army, the German high command made the announcement in a special communique which was preceded by a martial fanfare and followed by the funeral military air, "ich hatt' einen kamaraden" ("I had a comrade"), "Deutschland uber alles" and the Nazi Horst Wessel song.

All radio stations went silent then for three minutes and it was announced that all places of entertainment would be closed through Saturday.

German announcements sought to give the impression that the entire army, which the Russians say numbered 330,000, fought to the last bullet and then fought with shovels to the last man, but the Russians said they had taken 91,000 prisoners, including thousands of officers and two dozen generals.

The Germans, preparing to make the most of the defeat in their propaganda to stir the Nation to desperate efforts, also pictured the sacrifice of the Army as "not in vain."

"Fighting in Stalingrad has ceased," said the communique. "The Sixth Army, faithful to its oath until the last breath under the exemplary leadership of Field Marshal Paulus, has succumbed to the overwhelming superiority of the enemy and the unfavorable conditions."

Its fate was shared, the announcement added, by an antiaircraft division, two Rumanian divisions and a Croat regiment.

Completely encircled, its air supply system unable to function, and beset by "six Soviet armies," the sixth army tied down strong Russian forces and gave the German high command "the possibility to take counter-measures on the execution of which depended the fate of the entire Eastern Front," the communique declared.

General, 14 Others Rescued at Sea

search from January 28 to 30. On January 31 a B-17 (Flying Fortress) piloted by Lieutenant Bailey sighted flares from the party of Twining, who is from Charlotte, N. C.

Because of poor visibility he lost contact, but his data helped Captain Wilkinson locate the rafts from a B-17 at 8 a. m. the next day. An hour and a half later two Navy PBY's rescued the group.

The water was so rough that one of the naval patrol bombers damaged its hull in the take-off and had to be beached on its arrival to prevent it from sinking. The hull leaked badly and was filling rapidly with water when it was beached.

The survivors experienced such a heavy storm that they thought they would never be rescued. The men were so crowded on the rafts and became so cramped that they occasionally slid off the sides into the ocean to cool off and stretch their legs.

They were followed often by sharks, but only one attacked and that was beaten off with a paddle.

"It was the greatest sight of my life when the B-17 dipped its wing, showing that it had sighted us," said General Twining.

Colonel Jamison is suffering from a fracture of a small bone in the hand.

"I tried a piece of that gull (albatross) and it's tough," said Jamison. "I tried the liver and it was too tough. But those four squid we found in the gull were delicious."

The names of the other party members were not announced.

Twining's brother, Capt. Edward Twining, left a hospital to participate in the search.

General Harmon, a native of San Francisco, Calif., was graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1912, served in France in 1917 and in September of that year was appointed assistant chief of the Air Service Advance Zone in A. E. F. headquarters. Before going overseas he accompanied the punitive expedition into Mexico.

After World War I, he was graduated from the Army War College in Washington and for a short time commanded Bolling Field, leaving to serve on the General Staff.

Reds 22 Miles From Kursk; Gain in Drive on Rostov big German base and Orel to the north, and put the Red army within artillery shelling range of the city.

Other Soviet forces seized the town of Kagalnitskaya, only 30 miles southeast of ostov on the Salsk-Rostov railroad, increasing the peril to the Nazi Caucasian army, the midnight communique reported.

The fall of Kupoyansk, also gave the Russians control of a rail junction leading northeast to Valuiki, already in Russian hands, and northwest to Belgorod, another big German base about midway between Kursk and Kharkov.

Still another important railway junction, Krasny Liman, was seized. This town is far below Kupyansk on the railway running southeast from Kharkov to Voroshilovgrad, and is only about 12 miles northeast of Slavyansk, junction on another German-held communications system connecting Kharkov with the Sea of Azov.

Thus the Russians since their drive west from the Voronezh-Rostov railway had cut most of the German-held rail system connecting the Ukraine with their defenses in central Russia.

In the Caucasus the Russians were increasing their threat of encirclement to 200,000 Germans below Rostov.

"South of Rostov on the Don our troops as the result of a dashing offensive captured the town and large railway junction of Kuschevskaya," the communique said.

Kuschevskaya is 43 miles south of Rostov, Caucasian gateway city, but is even more important to the Russians since it is the junction for a spur railway leading southward to Krasnodar.

By taking it the Red army has cut off the retreat toward Rostov of the huge German forces based in the Krasnodar-Novorossisk areas of the western Caucasus, leaving the enemy the prospect of trying to leap the Kerch Straits to the Crimea.

Reds Take 16 Towns On Path to Rostov

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, Feb. 3.—The Russian armies of the south, reinforced with the massive weight of the veteran divisions which had sealed the immense and bloody victory of Stalingrad, closed in upon Rostov today, overrunning 16 additional towns on its upper and lower approaches.

Fighting was of great violence nearly everywhere, particularly on the front above Rostov, where the Soviet midday communique reported "ferocious" engagements.

The conclusion of the Stalingrad campaign, in which since November 19 more than one-half million Axis troops had been knocked out —275,000 killed and 228,650 taken prisoner—was saluted by Premier Stalin, as supreme commander, in a congratulatory message to the troops, commanders and political workers.

(The German high command officially admitted the destruction of the German Sixth Army, an antiaircraft division of the German air corps, two Rumanian divisions and one Croat regiment, with the announcement that they had "succumbed to the overwhelming superiority of the enemy and the unfavorable conditions."

(The Berlin radio announced that four days of mourning would be had throughout Germany, with all places of entertainment to be closed through Saturday. Funeral airs were played over the radio.

(The regular communique of the German high command again gave somber reports of nearly the whole of the Russian front. It was announced "a continuing movement as planned"—a retreat—between the Caucasus and the lower Don, and "heavy defensive attacks of great vicissitude between the Don and upper Donets."

The Soviet news agency Tass gave this account of the last hours of the battle for Stalingrad:

"Enemy resistance north of the city did not cease of itself. It was broken. After artillery preparation our troops drove a wedge into the enemy's defenses and then the agony of the last enemy group was on. But a few centers of German resistance remained and our shells served as a kind of invitation for surrender.

"Five minutes of shelling of the enemy dugouts were followed by 5 minutes of silence. And there they came, creeping out of their dugouts, waving their undershirts instead of flags of truce.

". . . This northern group consisted of picked Fascist troops. A nummber of units consisted wholly of members of the Nazi Party. All soldiers of this group were promoted to lance corporal (PFC) and corporal. Hitler had hoped thus to insure their sustained resistance in Stalingrad. However, the precipitous onslaught of our troops demoralized these troops—and they began to surrender with the same alacrity as the others, with their officers and generals.

War Council Told Of Africa Parley

sive against the Japanese.

Nash said Mr. Roosevelt laid before the council the advantages and disadvantages of punching into the Nazi European fortress through the Mediterranean's "soft under belly" and along the whole of the Atlantic Coast.

He went a bit further by outlining "what the likely campaigns should be during the present year," Nash said.

The New Zealand envoy put particular stress on the importance of the post-Casablanca visit of Prime Minister Churchill to Turkey. He said that much encouragement could be found in the fact that the Churchill-Inonu talks took place on Turkish soil.

Another bright note, Nash said, is contained in the fact that Finnish Premier Risto Ryti, recently revealed as having fraternized with the Japanese in Helsinki, is becoming worried that Finland is "on the wrong side" in the war.

4 Pilots Tell How President Followed Africa Flight by Landmarks

Bryan said, and appeared particularly impressed when a regiment of British-trained Nigerian troops greeted them at Bathhurst, singing in their native language. The Chief Executive's happiest moment, Bryan said, appeared to be when he was inspecting troops in Liberia. "He was very dirty, and his face was about the color of this," he said, pointing to a mahogany table.

Over Dakar, Bryan's craft came down to 3000 feet for a look at the harbor and French warships there.

The President's birthday party was described by Cone, who said he filled out the logbook for that day in red ink to doubly emphasize the fact that it was a red letter day. The menu, he said, included caviar and champagne, but the pilot made it clear that the crew had none of the champagne. Everyone, including the President, ate a hearty meal, served at noon high over Santa Domingo, Haiti and Cuba. As a prelude, he said, other members of the party sang "Happy Birthday" to the President.

Cone, a slim, studious-looking veteran of 7500 flying hours spent in Pan-Am's transpacific, South American and transatlantic routes, told how he greeted the President when the latter first boarded his ship at Miami.

"What did he say?" reporters asked.

"He said he was glad to meet me," the 34-year-old pilot smiled, "and I, of course, told him the same thing. He was an excellent passenger, and although we were very much surprised to learn the identity of our guest, it wasn't long before my crew settled down into the operations of a routine flight."

Cone said his giant ship, built to carry 89 persons, including a 15-man crew, averaged about 150 miles an hour for the entire journey, although this speed was stepped up to 195 miles in the excellent weather which prevailed on the return flight between Trinidad and Haiti.

Faster Ship

Much faster was the ship piloted by Bryan, who was reluctant to go into too much detail about the craft other than to say it was designed to carry "quite a few more passengers" than the 28 suggested by a newsman as its capacity load. His average speed for the entire trip was around 208 miles per hour.

"The President showed considerable interest whenever the speed was in excess of 200 miles per hour," declared Bryan, who was made chief pilot of the entire T. W. A. system in 1939 when he was only 28 years old.

With 11,000 hours and almost two million miles to his credit, the handsome, stocky pilot revealed that he had flown the same route only two weeks before he took the President over the North African countryside. He wouldn't say what his mission had been on the earlier occasion.

"Frank Amazement"

Smiling, and with considerable gusto, Bryan expressed his crew's "frank amazement" when the President signed their "short snorter" bills. Like Cone, he was loud in praise of the President's happy ability to "make you feel perfectly at home."

"We felt at ease," Bryan said, "as long as he was." And that, he indicated, was all the time.

As for the other two pilots, Terry volunteered the information that "we had less responsibility and more fun than anybody else."

Most of the time, the pilots said, the two planes actually carrying the party were in visual contact, although maintaining an altitude differential. At other times radio contact was maintained.

And at least part of the time, all four planes were virtually in visual contact.

"I sighted you on the return hop across the Atlantic," Cone informed Bryan, who evidently was getting this bit of news for the first time.

President Misses Sleep Telling of Flight

President Roosevelt's family kept him up until after midnight Monday "telling about his trip to Casablanca," Mrs. Roosevelt revealed yesterday at her press conference. And then, the First Lady said, he was pressed for details and had to answer many questions.

All this happened after "we had a sort of second birthday dinner for him," she said. Sharing honors at the dinner was Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., who has the same birthday. The President's real birthday dinner this year was eaten in the plane from which he returned from his African journey.

Mrs. Roosevelt denied at her conference that she is planning to head a Women's Land Army this summer. "I've been told I was going to head almost everything in the world," she laughed, "but I am not."

She made two pleas to the public. Her first was for more mysteries and Westerns for soldiers. The other was that clubs continue to hold their local meetings, although their national conferences may have to be abandoned during the war.

25c a Barrel Increase Asked For Crude Oil

The Petroleum Industry War Council, following a report by Secretary Ickes that 1942 oil consumption was nearly double the amount of crude oil reserves discovered during the year, asked today for a 25-cents-a-barrel price increase for crude, to stimulate new drilling.

The council is made up of industry representatives who serve in an advisory capacity to Ickes in his role as petroleum administrator. It asked Ickes to recommend the increase over present ceilings, which vary widely by areas and grades, and also to urge "appropriate adjustments" in price ceilings of oil products.

In a resolution the council said present ceilings made drilling for new reserves too risky to promote extension of operations. It contended also that an increase was necessary to cover increased costs of production and erase maladjustments in price maximums it said were in some areas.

57 Per Cent of Consumption

Ickes said 1942 oil consumption approximated 1,400,000,000 barrels, while the most liberal estimates put discoveries at 801 million barrels, or 57 per cent of consumption, and conservative estimates put the discovered reserves as low as 421 million barrels.

Deputy Administrator Ralph K. Davies summed it up this way: "We have been drawing on our accumulated capital (of oil) to meet our current expenses."

Davies said a Federal survey showed that 261 new oil fields were discovered and 74 new producing horizons were discovered in old fields during 1842.

New York, Feb. 3 (AP).—The American Petroleum Institute disclosed today that stocks of petroleum products in the East Coast area were only about 35 per cent of normal levels, as represented by average inventories for 1940-1941.

Index Released

An index figure supplied by the institute gave the first indication of petroleum supplies available for civilian use in the East Coast region since the institute several months ago discontinued publication of actual figures. Release of index figures was approved by Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes.

Based on average normal stocks represented by 100 for 1940 and 1941, the East Coast index number as of January 30 was 34.5 against 35.3 a week earlier, 42 at the end of December and 60.1 at mid-September, 1942.

The institute in its weekly report showed a continuance of recent trends in general supplies of fuel oils and gasoline, total finished and unfinished stocks of gasoline rose 1,728,000 barrels during the week to a total of 88,830,000 barrels compared with 100,864,000 a year ago. Stocks of light fuel oils dropped 977,000 barrels to 37,057,000 and heavy fuel oils increased 453,000 to 70,763,000.

Crude oil production in the United States was off 22,600 barrels for the week at 3,826,400 barrels which compared with 3,871,350 barrels a year ago.

Gas Grants May Put 15,000 in Election Race

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 3 (AP).—Mississippi could have some 15,000 candidates in this year's State election.

George T. Locke, president of the Mississippi Travelers Association, said he understood political candidates would get gasoline for their campaigns so he advised members of his group to announce for office and to solicit votes as they call on merchants.

"Who knows," Locke added, "some of 'em might get elected!"

Lend-Lease Bill to Go to House Next Week, Bloom Predicts

By the Associated Press

Chairman Bloom (Democrat) of New York said last night the House Foreign Affairs Committee probably would unanimously approve continuance of the Lend-Lease Act for another year, sending the resolution to the House for action late next week.

"I don't know of anyone against it," Bloom declared, "except Hitler, Mussolini and Tojo."

Dean G. Acheson, Assistant Secretary of State told the committee today that the "lend-lease has become the cornerstone of our wartime relations with friendly powers," and that the mutual aid agreements were "laying the foundations upon which peace can be built."

In response to questions, however, he assured the committee that those administering lend-lease had no intention to write into the agreements postwar trade and tariff pacts with other nations.

Representative Eaton (Republican) of New Jersey expressed hope that lend-lease could be used in days of peace as the key to "unlock the door to a golden age for all mankind." He said methods of distribution and cooperation developed under the program may furnish a guide "to strike the shackles" from movement of the world's resources and aid in making a better world for all people.

Acheson emphasized no final accounting between nations on lend-lease could be based upon the "dollar sign" nor a requirement that this Nation be repaid for its aid in gold.

"To do so," he said, "would stop altogether the triangular movement of trade, wreck the currency of other countries as well as that of this country, and would result in financial chaos."

In discussing final settlement, he said:

"We must seek the reduction of trade barriers, and of other obstacles to trade, both on our side and on the side of other nations. Reducing trade barriers is an indispensable necessary first step toward our goal of full employment."

Representative Rogers (Republican) of Massachusetts, asked to examine secret lend-lease agreements with South American countries. Acheson said he would refer the request to Secretary Hull. In contrast with the master agreements with such countries as China and Britain, he explained, the agreements with the South American countries specify in detail just what military material and aid they are to receive, and thus have not been published.

3200 Merchant Seamen Lost In First Year of Conflict

American merchant marine losses in dead and missing during the first year of the war totaled more than 3200—3.8 per cent of the total number of merchant sailors—compared with a rate of three-fourths of 1 per cent for the armed services, Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, said yesterday.

In a statement "to clear up rumors and reports of personnel difficulties among the crews of the Nation's war cargo carriers," Davis said America's 70,000 seamen "delivered the goods," and showed "patriotism, courage and devotion to duty."

He also made public a report by Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the War Shipping Administration, which declared:

1. American seamen are loyal and efficient.

2. About three-fourths of the off-shore merchant seamen are always at sea—"in the front line."

3. Willingness of sailors to brave bombs and torpedoes was shown when 100,000 persons responded to WSA's call for experienced seamen.

4. Actual pay for the average able seaman or fireman, figuring his board and room, is approximately $57 a week, about what a second-class rigger earns in a shipyard.

5. WSA's Labor Relations Division, which investigates all reports of infractions of discipline, found practically all such incidents occurred in ports, and were the result of the continued strain under which seamen work.

6. Despite an expected increase in enemy attacks on our merchant shipping, greater percentage of survivals is expected in 1943 because of more escort vessels, better armed ships, more and improved safety devices and more experienced crews.

Land said there was little chance of missing seamen turning up. By counting all 3200 as dead, he added, the number would be equal to the total dead, killed in action of the Army, Marine and Coast Guard combined.

The latest official combined casualty list, issued as of January 6, covered those killed in 13 months, while Land's figures covered the lists gave these totals of those listed as dead: Army 2193, Marine Corps 1201 and Coast Guard 51. Land did not include the Navy's dead, which were listed January 6 at 4657.

Fair Employment Conference Asked By Roosevelt

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

President Roosevelt asked War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt yesterday to call a conference for the purpose of "revising and strengthening" the scope and powers of the Fair Employment Practices Committee.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt said that "when the machinery has been established to meet the problems," the postponed hearings on race discriminations in the railroads—and any other cases which may have been delayed—"will be continued."

The railroad hearing, which had been scheduled for January 26, was "postponed" by McNutt.

Postponement of the hearing was seen by Negro and other minority groups as an indication that the Administration had "capitulated" to the deep-seated prejudice of southern Democrats in Congress.

Psychology Tried To Find Motive In Child-Slaying

Cincinnati, Feb. 3 (AP).—Police today turned to psychology in an attempt to find a motive for the strangulation of 29-month-old Gail Marie Bradner, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bradner.

Maj. John Seebohm, inspector of police, said a "strangled" doll was discovered on a kitchen chair in the room adjacent to the one where police found the garroted body of the blonde, blue-eyed child. The doll also was blonde, and the noose around its neck was similar to that used in the slaying.

Miss Anna Marie Teal, 31, former mental patient, walked into Central Police Station yesterday and said, "I have killed a child."

Detective Chief Emmett D. Kirgan said Miss Teal was confined a hospital in 1942, a victim of dementia praecox. Police said she told them Mrs. Bradner placed the baby in her charge when leaving for her first day of work as a waitress.

OPA Advises Inventory of Canned Goods Before Rationing Lid Goes On February 20

By Irving Perlmeter
Associated Press Staff Writer

The can opener will yield to the cook book after midnight February 20.

From that time until March 1, when rationing starts, there will be no canned fruits or vegetables sold.

Frozen fruits and vegetables, dried fruits (not dried vegetables), and canned soups and canned baby foods also are included in the order, issued yesterday by the Office of Price Administration.

Fresh fruits and vegetables will not be rationed, and home canning will be encouraged because such goods will not be counted against ration coupons.

Rationing will be by points, 48 points per person in the month of March, regardless of age or occupation. Since canned baby foods are also on the list, babies will get the same ration points as their elders. Ill persons requiring special diets will be able to get them on medical certificates.

Restaurants Limited

Restaurants and other public eating places will be limited on canned goods but, under present plans, will not collect ration coupons from their customers—leaving all ration points to be spent for home cooking.

To housewives one big problem will be that of planning a month ahead. For instance, at 48 points per person, a family of three will have 144 points to spend in March.

Each can, bottle or package on the new ration list will have a "point value"—perhaps 10 points for a medium-size can of peas, 7 points for a can of spinach, 8 points for a half-pound package of raisins, etc. These figures are only examples. The real list of values won't be made public until after February 20.

When she learns these values the housewife will be advised to figure out how she wants to spend her 144 points for the family of three, for instance. If canned peaches were 14 points per can, she could buy 10 cans of peaches but would have only 4 points left for all other things. Just as she shops for economical foods on a money basis, she will be expected to spend her points so that they go farthest in satisfying both the nutrition and taste needs of her family.

The first task of all householders will be to inventory their pantries as of midnight February 20.

OPA advised this procedure: Empty the cupboards onto a table. Put away the unrationed foods, such as macaroni, olives, canned milk, chili, home-canned goods, etc.

Then put away the rationed cans or packages which contain less than 8 ounces each. These are mostly small cans of baby food. Then put away five cans or packages for every member of the family, paying no attention to the size or contents of the food. The number of cans or packages left on the table must be reported to the clerk who will issue the ration books during the six days beginning February 22.

There will be 1,500,000 of these clerks stationed in schools, churches and other public places. One adult will register for the whole family. First he will have to show (but keep) his family's sugar-coffee ration books. Coffee stamps will be deducted from books of persons who report that they had more than one pound per adult in the family last November 28.

Red Stamps For Meat

The clerk will then ask about the number of cans that were left on the table after the Sunday pantry inventory. If there were any left, the clerk will tear out one 8-point stamp for each one.

The books will contain both red and blue stamps. The blues ones are for canned goods, the red ones will be used about a month later for meat rationing.

Each stamp will bear both a letter and a number. The letter will indicate when the stamp can be used—A, B, and C will be for March.

The figures represent point values and will be in denominations of 1, 2, 5 and 8. A can that "costs" 10, for instance, could be "paid" for with 5s, a 2 and an 8, or ten ones. Most grocers will mark the point values on the cans or counters right along with the money prices.

Point values may be changed from month to month, but, in general, will be raised and lowered along the same lines as money prices—more points for bigger cans or scarcer commodities.

Infantile Paralysis Virus Isolated

By G. B. Lal
International News Service Science Editor

New York, Feb. 3 (INS).—The first announcement that the virus which causes infantile paralysis in man has been isolated, seen and photographed by two Swedish scientists was received today in an International News Service dispatch from Stockholm.

It was also learned tonight that in this country scientists at Yale and the University of Pennsylvania have similarly observed the virus of infantile paralysis. These American scientists, however, have not yet published their achievements.

The Swedish scientists, Drs. Sven Gard and Arne Tiselius of the University of Upsala, isolated the virus both from the tissues of human beings having infantile paralysis and from laboratory mice in which the same virus can be developed. The two were found to be identical in appearance and other characteristics.

Observation and photography of the virus, which is far smaller than the ordinary disease germ, were done with the Stemens type of electron microscope. In this country electron microscopes capable of giving an enlarged photographic picture up to 100,000 times the size of the virus particle were used.

With 50,000 times magnification the University of Upsala scientists succeeded in seeing and photographing the individual units of the virus.

Dr. D. W. Gundakunst, medical director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis in New York, said:

"Drs. Sven Gard and Arne Tiselius made a noteworthy contribution toward the control of infantile paralysis in human beings. Their research is of fundamental importance."

The first problem suggested by the isolation of the virus is the possibility of making effective vaccines for prevention of infantile paralysis. If the purified virus can be used for making a really effective vaccine, a great step forward would be taken.

Wallace Envies Uruguayan Vice President

IN his private chambers at the Capitol, Vice President Henry Wallace gave a luncheon in honor of the visiting Vice President-elect of Uruguay, Dr. Alberto Guani.

When he rose to introduce Guani to the select group of Senators, Wallace said, "Doctor Guani, as Vice President of Uruguay, will have an advantage over me, in that he will be allowed to vote on all measures and to speak in the debate.

"But his greatest advantage," added Wallace with a twinkle, "is that members of the Uruguayan Senate are allowed to speak for only one hour, except by unanimous consent, when they may speak for only two hours."

How F. D. R. and Churchill Work

Inside word regarding the Casablanca discussions is that 99 per cent of them were military. Very little in the way of international politics was discussed. Churchill and Roosevelt left the details to their military and naval men, but they themselves made the major decisions.

Both Churchill and Roosevelt have a long background of experience in military and naval strategy. F. D. R.'s mother once found him at the age of 14 reading Admiral Mahan, long considered the toughest, driest, but in those days the best book on naval strategy (it was based on battleships).

Churchill conceived and pushed various military moves in the last war, including the Gallipoli campaign. In this war he personally has made most of the major decisions involving British forces.

In Washington, Roosevelt has a large map of the world on his wall. A naval aide moves miniature ships and symbols to indicate how many men, and what naval strength we have in various parts of the world.

What happens is that Churchill and Roosevelt propose alternative offensives, such as a drive into Norway, or a drive through the Balkans, or a crossing into Italy, for their experts to chew on. The experts then come back with a report on how many men, how many ships, how many planes, and how much in the way of losses would be necessary for Norway, for Italy, for the Balkans.

With all these alternative factors before them, the decision is jointly made.

Errol Flynn vs. Ed Flynn

TALL, dignified Senator Elbert Thomas fo Utah is not one to disappoint a lady. But the request of a well-dressed woman who visited his office during Senate hearings on the appointment of Australian Minister Edward J. Flynn had him speechless.

She identified herself as the owner of "several theaters" in California and wanted to know if she could attend the Flynn hearings. Thomas assured her that he would be delighted to be of assistance.

"The hearings are open to the public," he said.

"That's wonderful, Senator," gushed his visitor. "I've exhibited Errol Flynn's pictures in my theaters, but I've never seen him in real life. Maybe I can get his autograph with your help."

The Senator explained that although sometimes confused even by professionals in the State Department, diplomacy, not rape, was involved. He graciously escorted his caller to the hearing room.

Blood From Washington

DON'T make any mistake about what the people of Washington are doing for the war. If you have any doubts, go down to the Blood Bank headquarters of the Red Cross. Four hundred donors a day is not unusual.

They come in blocs—for instance, all the clerks and office staff from Secretary of Agriculture Wickard's office; another group from the Justice Department; another from the Tariff Commission; another from the Federal Communciations Commission.

One day a lady of about 70 came in. This was her seventh blood donation.

"It's about all I'm good for at my age," she said, "but I want to give all I can."

She gave a full pint of blood for the Navy.

Red Army

UNITED STATES military observers explain recent Russian successes in terms of a development not generally realized in the United States—liberation of the generals from political domination.

Under the system which prevailed in Russia in the early months of the war, the Red generals were responsible to the political commissars. This made them overcautious, prevented daring, resolute action.

Then came the requirement that commisars themselves take military training and indoctrination. Simultaneously their authority over the generals was removed.

Now the Red army is run by the Red army.

D. B. C., WASHINGTON, D. C.—The charge that Jews are not proportionately represented in the Army is false. Officials here believe this report to be the creation of Nazi propagandists. Sample tests made in certain cities indicate that Jewish elements of the population have contributed as many or more men to the armed services, proportionately, as other elements.

In Trenton, N. J., for example, Jews make up 6.1 per cent of the total population of the city, but the number of Jews Trenton sent to the service is 8.4 per cent of her total of men in service.

House Unit Votes to Extend Dies Study for Two Years

By the Associated Press

The Dies Committee on Un-American activities won a vote of confidence from the rules committee yesterday despite a charge by Representative Folger (Democrat), North Carolina, that the Dies group was too interested in publicity and concentrated on Russia rather than Germany and Japan.

Chairman Dies (Democrat), Texas, said he would seek House action tomorrow on the Rules Committee's resolution for a two-year extension, and predicted fewer than 50 members would oppose it. Not once since its creation in 1938 have more than 50 opposed continuing the Dies group, its chairman recalled.

Folger accused the committee of "not rendering a valuable service to the Government or the people in these critical times," and questioned the wisdom of its past criticisms and exposures of Communist activities.

"Russia is on our side fighting," Folger told the Rules Committee, asserting the Dies investigators have spent about 90 per cent of their time investigating Communists and Communist activities.

"A bona fide investigation of anything that is un-American is all right," he added, but "I'm opposed to widespread publicity for an attack on a government and a people who are our allies."

Committee members asked if Folger believed in the Communist philosophy of government. He said he did not.

Dies denied that the committee had concentrated on Communists, asserting it repeatedly has investigated and exposed Axis activities in this country.

Widespread publicity for the committee was due to "the tremendous interest" of people throughout the country, he said, adding that if the committee failed to get publicity its efforts would be useless.

The Rules Committee voted to add a Republican member to the Dies Committee, making the political line-up five Democrats and three Republicans. All appointments are made by Speaker Rayburn, and the five incumbents, Dies, Starnes (Democrat), Alabama; Voorhis (Democrat), California; Thomas (Republican), New Jersey, and Mason (Republican), Illinois, are expected to be reappointed if the House votes to continue the committee. The committee now has two vacancies.

Arbuckle to Hear Contempt Charge Verdict Monday

Justice Bolitha J. Laws set Monday as the day when he would render a decision on whether William W. Arbuckle, convicted last Friday of embezzling $1080 of Senate Restaurant funds, and his chief defense witness, Robert C. Henderson, should be cited for contempt of court for giving conflicting testimony during the trial.

Yesterday marked the second day of the contempt arguments during which both defense and prosecution counsel cited previous cases purporting to show the validity or unvalidity of bringing a contempt citation.

Both defendants have admitted their previous testimony of jointly witnessing a transfer of the missing funds from Arbuckle to William H. King, Arbuckle's assistant, may have been false.

Cadillac

Now it can be told!

After the hard-hitting American forces landed in North Africa, there was a tremendous roar of gunfire from a weapon no army had ever faced before—and a bewildered enemy gave ground hastily.

It was the baptismal day for the Cadillac-built M-5 tank—a brilliant new weapon built in complete secrecy in the Cadillac plants.

Even yet, the entire story cannot be told. But we can tell you that Cadillac engineers and craftsmen have worked heroically for more than a year, behind sealed doors, to create one of the really new and bewildering weapons in the Allied arsenal. The British call it the "Honey". The American boys say it is precisely the sort of tank they would expect from Cadillac.

We are not yet in position to tell you the details, because this new tank has two innovations which are wholly new in tank warfare.

Tank production, of course, is but a part of Cadillac's work in the task of arming America. We also produce a major percentage of the precision parts for a famous airplane engine. And we have done so from the day this engine moved into volume production.

When the time comes for a full revelation of Cadillac's war effort, we are sure the American public will feel that its faith in Cadillac has again been justified.

Saving Gas

Our local gas subscribers have been notified that "gas is a war fuel" and must be conserved; that, furthermore, in Washington an increased population could tax facilities beyond capacity on "peak load" days. This means that unless citizens are saving, some restriction may have to be enforced. According to the gas company, this might necessitate complete shutoffs in whole sections of greater Washington. However, if we can economize in the use of gas without compulsion, inconvenience to the consumer can be avoided. That individuals can help was shown in December when the cold weather gas demands became so heavy as to neccessitate radio appeals to reduce gas usage at once. Response was immediate. The gas company has listed precautions which should produce long-term savings for the users of kitchen ranges, furnaces, water heaters, and refrigerators. It is to be hoped that they will be heeded.

German Pinch

The economic blockade of Germany is now beginning to be felt in real earnest. Much was expected of this weapon at the beginning of the war, but not enough account had been taken of German preparedness in reserves and substitutes and of the requisitioning from the occupied countries. The result was that we have tended to go to the other extreme and imagine that the Germans are proof against blockade. The facts are, however, that the pinch has arrived. The new Nazi clothes-rationing edict, which throws light on Germany's position with regard to the important war commodity of textiles, is proof of it.

Germany has always been largely dependent upon imports for her supplies of cotton and wool. Now that the North African supply has been shut off, the sole source of wool is from domestic production, plus fleeces from whatever flocks have been permitted to remain in the occupied countries. The considerable cotton yield expected last year from some of the conquered portions of Russia is said to have been destroyed by premature frosts. Thus a British authority estimates that if it were not for the elaborate synthetic textile industry developed long before the war the German situation could now be considered even worse than it was in the winter of 1917-18.

The new German clothes-rationing card includes 100 points, expendable over a period of 18 months. The previous card contained 120 points, expendable over 16 months. Overcoats are now purchasable only on special permit and issued only in instances of "dire need." However, those who manage to obtain such permits need not surrender any coupons from their clothing cards. Suits likewise are obtainable only on special permits, but where these are granted only 20 points will be deducted from the card, instead of 80 points, as was the case last year when the permit was not required. A blanket would require a whole year's coupons, which is the same as saying that blankets are unobtainable. Purchases of shoes by adults still require special permission from the authorities, but children under 15 have coupons entitling them to two pairs of leather shoes in the period covered by the card in addition to sandals, tennis shoes, slippers and so on. Uppers for wooden-soled shoes are now reported as being manufactured from the most fantastic materials, including human hair.

The problem of German textile control, appears to have been severely complicated by the continuing bombardments of German cities and towns. As the result of the bombings or the enforced evacuations, large numbers of civilians seem to have lost all or most of their wardrobes. This is pretty plainly indicated in the announcement by Herr Kehrl, the Nazi clothing director, that a special office will be set up to take care of the clothing claims of air-raid victims.

The textile situation as concerns the army is obscure. Last year, it will be recalled, the German quartermaster service was caught utterly unprepared for the Russian winter that the troops were forced to endure. It had to levy on such countries as Norway. Thus far the winter of 1942-43 on the Russian front is said to have been exceptionally mild, and probably clothing has not been an important contributing factor to the recent German disasters. A wide variation in the quality of the clothing worn by captured German prisoners is reported by the Russians. All in all, the War Trade Department of the British Embassy here believes that the German soldiers are as well clothed as last year, if not better. But obviously this has been at the expense of what until recently was the civilian population.

Now, of course, except for the aged, a German civilian population can scarcely be said to exist. The children under 16—enrolled, as so many of them are, in the Hitler Youth, and subjected to something approximating a military regimen—can scarcely be considered civilians. Thus there is no point in speculating on the effect of the new clothes-rationing program on civilian morale. The question now is whether the undoubtedly critical situation as regards textiles affords a safe index to the general economic position of Germany as the result of the continental blockade. In respect to textiles and other essential raw materials, in other words, is she in a position to wage a prolonged war of defense? The answer seems to be that she is not.

Tires To Spare

Mr. Jeffers was supplied with an illustration that the War Department is seeking to run the civilian economy on the very day that he made the charge. Speaking through Undersecretary Patterson the department came out with a recipe for handling Mr. Jeffers' own office as rubber director. The suggested program fell into seven parts. The items that have attracted most attention are those providing for the requisitioning of the people's fifth tires and of so-called surplus cars in the private garages of the Nation amounting to about seven million. Aside from their officiousness, the proposals are interesting only as they show the utter impracticality of the War Department in dealing with civilian problems.

Both suggestions would accomplish exactly nothing except car deterioration, expense for the Government, and administrative chaos. Suppose the Government seized these cars and spares. What would it do? Obviously the hoard would have to be collected from the public and then kept in Government warehouses. Finding storage would be a problem to tax even the ingenuity of the War Department. Already the Government has a huge stock of tires in its own and dealers' possession which are straining the Nation's storage facilities to the limit. Eleven million tires were collected in the buying of idle tires. About three million more new and used tires are jamming dealers' warehouses. New and used cars to the number of three-quarters of a million are likewise in their hands. The entire stock is a frozen asset either in Government ownership or under Government restriction. It has presented the Government authorities with an urgent problem in storage and upkeep.

Only after many months is this problem beginning to be solved. Last spring we called attention to the lack of care of the stockpile of new cars which had been frozen in dealers' hands after provision for purchase with RFC funds. Every automobile owner knows that a car must be both safeguarded and used a little in order to prevent deterioration. Yet there was the spectacle in this District—a spectacle repeated all over the country—of frozen cars parked wheel to wheel in open lots, set apart by the Government for rationing but left to the dealers to keep till wanted, and depreciating almost visibly. Now the Government has succeeded in getting them properly "embalmed," though dead storage still promotes deterioration.

Imagine this added problem of looking after seven million cars and every fifth tire in private hands. If the War Department knows of a place to look after them, nobody else does. The fact is that there is only one place for those cars and those tires, and that is where they are now, namely, in private garages. Here the Government is saved expense. The cars and the spares are protected from deterioration. They are saved as part of the national stockpile on emergency call. And the rubber director has time to tackle his vast problem of getting his already collected tires recapped. Under the War Department plan Mr. Jeffers' office would become a madhouse.

Without doubt the country must accustom itself to a lean regimen compatible with efficiency. None has been ahead of this newspaper in advocating Spartan living. But discomfort for the sadistic pleasure of imposing it would breed irritation and worse in the American people. And, aside from these psychological repercussions, the inconvenience to the country of further disrupting American life and economy, which flourish on rubbered wheels, would retard our war industry. Let us be sensible. Mr. Patterson's suggestion for the seizure of the spare tire would make all passenger driving a hazard. It would likewise promote rather than save an expenditure of rubber as civilian drivers were compelled to drive broken-down cars to the nearest service station. In short, the proposals are about as constructive as the Chinese notion of setting fire to the house in order to roast the pig.

Mr. Jeffers is making our minimum passenger traffic self-sustaining out of our tire and scrap stockpiles. The combination of the speed law, car rationing, gasoline restrictions and driving bans will provide just enough driving to keep our passenger cars in condition. Self-sustenance for our passenger cars is fortified by making victory tires out of reclaimed rubber and by recapping the seized tires. This program should be enough to satisfy the armed services. As it is, all crude rubber has been segregated for military and export purposes and for commercial truck and bus needs. The present program of the synthetic plants is likewise destined for military and export services and for truck and bus transport. We did not agree with Mr. Jeffers' claims for materials for synthetic products over the claims for the escort-vessel program. But Mr. Patterson has provided him with a case for his assertion that the War Department has enough to do to run the war without trying also to run the country.

Uniform Divorce

Senator Capper's renewed attempt to have Congress empowered to pass uniform marriage and divorce legislation is a reminder that a peacetime problem has been allowed to hang on unsettled for too long. Now it faces a Congress immersed in the job of winning the war. And yet, as Senator Capper points out, the recent ruling of the Supreme Court that Nevada divorces are valid in other States makes it necessary that action be taken now to clarify the whole marriage and divorce situation in the United States.

The court's decision, while removing the stigma of bigamy from marriages of persons divorced in Nevada, and making children of such marriages legitimate, yet does not clear up the conflicts in State laws relating to wills, inheritances, taxes and other matters affected by marriage and divorce. And the court's recognition of decrees in the so-called "divorce mill" States has the discriminatory effect of making divorce a luxury available only to those who can afford the trip and residence away from home. Moreover, to add to the confusion, the widest diversity of divorce laws continue to exist in the States. In one State, South Carolina, divorce is not granted for any cause. Other States range in their requirements from the single cause of adultery to a wide array of causes including the omnibus one of mental cruelty. Terms of residence required for divorce range from six weeks to three years.

Regularly in each Congress Senator Capper has introduced his 20-year-old resolution calling for a constitutional amendment giving Congress power to pass uniform marriage and divorce laws. Once the resolution advanced as far as a hearing. There has also been much public discussion of the matter. Women's clubs have passed resolutions indorsing such legislation and church organizations have appointed commissions to study it. But nothing has ever been done. The matter has been too controversial, involving States' rights and sectional feeling, and, what is even more touchy to a legislator, religious and social viewpoints. Truly the drawing of a uniform marriage and divorce law would be a headache to Congress. However, Senator Capper is not dismayed by that. Believing that such a bill can be drawn in sufficiently general and fundamental terms to be workable, he has attached to his resolution a tentative bill which he regards as a starting point for legislation.

Sooner or later Congress is going to have to tackle uniform marriage and divorce laws. The shifting of population in this country, already great, is likely to become even more pronounced with improved transportation developments after the war. Increase in population, immigration, expanding industrial life, will heighten the complexities of living. All this will make even more necessary Federal legislation governing marriage relationships. Busy as Congress is now with the war, it should at least get action started in the States on a constitutional amendment empowering it to act on this problem.

Ne Plus Ultra

Italian communiques have never been noted for any fanatical devotion to the truth. But hitherto they have had at least a modicum of veracity mixed up with exaggeration. This week, however, the Italian communique writers achieved the ne plus ultra in fabrication. On Monday the Rome newspapers described how "the port of Valetta (Malta) was attacked by missiles of heavy caliber for 25 minutes with good results." Actually it was the first time the often-bombed Maltese population had heard about it. It appears that a few enemy aircraft did approach the island that day and at great height. But before they reached their destination British fighters went up to combat them, whereupon the Italian bombers turned tail and fled.

In other words, not having been able to bomb Malta, the communique writers decided that they had better bomb it on paper anyway. This was satisfactory all around—to the Maltese, who were spared even a token bombing, to the Italian fliers who came back with their skins whole, to the communique writers who had had a practice run in prevarication at no cost in planes. And since the Italian people have been lied to so long and so often, it is doubtful if they paid any attention to the report. So that, in effect, they, too, were not deceived. Incidentally, Malta may yet earn a Congressional Medal, as it has already earned and won the George Cross, for the manner in which it has turned from its superb defensive to the offensive—against the Nazis in Tunisia.

Canada Looks South

By Janet R. Keith

Eyes Pan-Americanism

BACK in 1928 the United States Government was officially opposed to the idea of Canadian entry into the pan-American Union, it was revealed in State papers recently released in Washington. The basis of the objection was that Canada, as part of the British Empire, did not control her own foreign policy and was not actually an autonomous American State.

All this was before the Statute of Westminster declared that the nations of the British Commonwealth are "equal in status, in no way subordinate to one another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs." Today, as several United States officials have pointed out during the past few years, there would probably be no objections raised if Canada were to seek membership in the Pan-American Union. But there has never been a formal test of the issue, because Canada has never attempted to join. At the council table of the Union there is a seat reserved for Canada, but it is still empty.

Why has Canada been so slow in turning her attention toward the rest of the Americas? Partly it has been a fear on the part of conservative elements that strengthening of Western Hemisphere ties would inevitably mean weakening of British Commonwealth ties. Partly it has been a distrust of the motives underlying the Pan-American movement. (A prominent Canadian described Pan-Americanism in its early stages as "an uneasy partnership between an industrial colossus of Anglo-Saxon origin and culture, mainly Protestant, whose foreign policy was colored with imperialism, and a number of raw materials producing countries of varying size, of Latin origin, and Catholic culture, still largely feudal in structure and highly nationalist in tradition.") Partly it has been a lack of interest in Latin America on the part of average Canadians.

Commercial Ties Weak

And, underlying these political and ideological reasons has been the absence of strong commercial ties, the fact that Canada's trade with South America represented only a negligible part of Canadian imports and exports. Of Canada's total imports in 1939, 66.1 per cent came from the United States and 2.8 per cent from South America; 41.1 per cent of her exports went to the United States and only 1.8 per cent to South America.

But in recent years, especially since the outbreak of war, there has been a noticeable change in Canada's attitude toward Pan-Americanism. More and more Canadians have come to share President Roosevelt's interpretation of it as a "good neighbor" policy. The Ogsdenburg Agreement has taught Canada to think in terms of hemispheric defense. Extremely close wartime cooperation with the United States has demonstrated that Canada can and must fulfill her geographic obligations at the same time as she fulfills her obligations to Britain and other members of the Commonwealth. And the closing of many European and Asiatic markets has demonstrated that Canada and South America can benefit tremendously by increased north-south trade.

The first official recognition of this awakened interest was a formal statement by the Prime Minister in the spring of 1939 on the subject of Canada's sending a representative to a Pan-American conference:

"It would be possible to propose or to have a friendly member propose that the necessary adjustments should be made in the constitution and procedure of the union to make our membership possible. Public opinion in favor of such course has undoubtedly increased in recent years. I do not, however, consider that it has yet become sufficiently widespread, or sufficiently informed and matured, to warrant steps in that direction. It is a possibility which should be given consideration in the future, along with other means, trade and governmental, of bringing about closer relationships between our country and these countries which are destined to play an increasingly significant part in the world's affairs."

Relations More Cordial

Direct action has followed this statement. In the fall of 1941 the first government-sponsored trade mission to South America succeeded in concluding most-favored-nation trade agreements with Brazil, Argentina and Chile. A temporary agreement was made with Ecuador, and a previous agreement with Uruguay was strengthened. While the full benefits of these treaties will not be felt until the postwar period, Canada's exports to Latin America in 1940 were already up 50 per cent over those of 1938. In normal times Canada's chief exports to South America include newsprint, farm implements, asbestos, electrical apparatus, canned fish.

Within the last few years Canada has opened legations in Brazil, Chile and Argentina, and it is thought that exchange of diplomats with Peru, Ecuador and Mexico is not far away. When Canada first Minister to Chile was appointed recently Prime Minister King observed that "a new link has been forged between the northernmost nation and the southernmost nation of the Americas." There is no doubt that Canada is looking south!

Turkey And The War

By Barnet Nover

The Churchill-Inonu Meeting

THE MEETING at Adana of Premier Churchill of Britain and President Ismet Inonu of Turkey is being described, and correctly, as a sequel to the Casablanca conference.

But that tells only part of the story. For there could have been no Adana meeting, as there could have been no Casablanca conference, had it not been for the great military victories won by the Allies during the past three months.

In other words, Adana represents the first diplomatic fruits of the revolutionary change that has occurred in the military balance of power in Europe and the Mediterranean.

EIGHT MONTHS ago Turkey was threatened with encirclement by the Axis. Rommel's Afrika-Korps then stood at the gates of Alexandria and the Nile Valley. The Axis forces in Russia were sweeping ahead toward the Volga and the Caspian and, following the capture of Sevastopol, there was the danger that Germany would become the dominant power in the Black Sea.

To make matters worse, reports began to flood Ankara about that time that Hitler was shipping large quantities of heavy and light artillery, tanks, planes and boats to Bulgaria via Yugoslavia. The Belgrade-Nish-Sofia Railroad, it was reported, was literally choked with army trains.

If the Turks were intimidated by these developments they showed no signs of it. Even in the darkest days of that gloomy period in Allied fortunes Turkey never showed the slightest disposition to succumb to German pressures and become, as Bulgaria, Rumania and Hungary had become, a satellite of the Axis.

On the other hand, it is doubtful whether, at that time, the Turks were in a position effectively to resist a powerful Axis thrust across Anatolia to the Middle East. For while the Turks have a deserved reputation as brave and able soldiers they suffer from a serious lack of modern weapons of war as well as from a lack of facilities which would enable them to manufacture such weapons themselves.

IT IS THUS that this country and Great Britain did what they could to help Turkey build up her defenses while, at the same time, some military supplies were brought in by the Turks from Germany.

As long as the Nile Valley was threatened and, concurrently, a possible Axis break-through to the Persian Gulf had to be planned against, the Allies were obviously in no position to send to Turkey more than a small percentage of the weapons that country needed. On the other hand, the Turks have been far too wise to become dependent for their armament needs on the nation from which they had most to fear—Nazi Germany.

THE GREAT victories won by General Montgomery and the British Eighth Army in Egypt and Libya and by the Russians at Stalingrad, in the northern Caucasus and along the Don bend have made possible a considerable increase in Allied aid to Turkey and without any serious drain on Allied shipping facilities.

Alexandria and Suez are no longer in danger from an attack via Libya and Egypt. The threat of a German break-through to the Middle East via the Caspian, the Caucasus and the Black Sea has now effectively been eliminated.

For both of these reasons, at least a portion of the supplies assembled by the Allies in the Middle East and in Egypt can now be diverted to Turkey. And as Turkey is strengthened the door to the sole remaining route by which Hitler might still get to the Persian Gulf would be bolted and barred against him.

IN THIS RESPECT the Adana meeting dovetails perfectly with the Casablanca meeting which preceded it by some days.

At Casablanca the British and American leaders laid down the lines of the forthcoming offensive action to be taken against the Axis, at Adana an agreement has been reached which, at the very least, will enormously strengthen the Allied eastern flank in the Mediterranean sector.

The Adana meeting may have the further consequence of ultimately providing the Allies with a base of operations very close to the Axis' flank. But that possibility is, as yet, more theoretical than practical. For the time being we cannot expect Turkey to do other than remain neutral. Indeed, a strongly defended neutrality policy by Turkey meets Allied needs in every particular at this juncture.

After Tunisia has been cleared of Axis forces, after the whole of the Mediterranean has been opened up to Allied shipping and when an attack on the "soft underbelly" of the Axis becomes a practical possibility, the Turkish position may undergo a further change. For the time being the question whether Turkey will exchange benevolent neutrality for active belligerence is purely academic. It is enough, at this time, to say that at Adana the Allies won a major diplomatic victory.

A Veteran Reminisces

Noticing in the papers that we will need about 11 million men in our armed forces reminds me that during the Spanish-American War and the Philippine Insurrection in 1898 to 1900, our Army consisted of 25,000 regular soldiers and President McKinley asked for 100,000 volunteers. About 175,000 responded. They were men from 16 to 50, single men, married men, those with families, coming from every hamlet and city in America, to serve for the duration of the war.

We were equipped with winter uniforms, hit or miss, issued half of a pup tent, with Army blue blankets—no beds, no sheets, no pillows—we slept on the bare ground. Our food was cooked out in the open air. We had no pure food laws, no electric refrigeration or place to keep our foods, nor were our men given a chance for any officers' commissions. We served in fever-stricken Cuba, the jungles of the 24,000 islands in the Philippines, where leprosy, cholera, bubonic and other filthy diseases were very prevalent. We had no USO, no recreation of any kind, no insurance policies, no allotments of any kind, no books to read, no invitations to supper and wine with the finest people all over the land. No shows or actors entertained us, mails were few and far between, no job security was promised. We had no weekend furloughs, and yet with all these handicaps we made America the strongest nation in the civilized world. Such great leaders arose as Theodore Roosevelt, Pershing, Hobson and Rowan, who delivered a message to Garcia in Cuba in '98, and others. We were paid $13 in the States and $15.60 across the pond. We went to the yellow fever country of Cuba and the Philippines in cattle boats. Our horses and mules were boxed on upper decks and soldiers lived down below.

Today our sons and grandsons are fighting this global war and we old veterans know that these boys will bring this war to an early successful conclusion. We know that our Army today is the best equipped, best fed and best dressed. A country worth living in, is worth fighting for.

Democratic Likes

Evicting Renters

We are constantly urged to help our men in the service by giving blood, buying war stamps, working in canteens, contributing to USO and so on. But, there is one thing which seems to be neglected.

Our military hospitals are caring for the wives and families of men in the service, in order that their morale need not be impaired by distress over physical problems. However, there is another worry which could be prevented by civilians. That is the question of shelter. When a man is ordered overseas and leaves his wife and children in a house for which he has been paying rent at regular intervals, he should be allowed the security of knowing that they can remain unmolested for the duration. It does not seem fair that a landlord can sell that house and give the service man's family the inconvenience of moving and the uncertainty of finding another home. Surely that anxiety is not good for a man's morale! A. D. H.

Bikes On Sidewalks

I see by a recent paper that a boy while riding his bicycle on the sidewalk of Klingle Bridge struck a lady, thereby causing her death. The boy claims to be but 14 years of age, but does it not seem very necessary, as an example to the many other boys who ride bicycles upon our sidewalks, that the boy in question should be severely reprimanded by the Juvenile Court?

If there is no law in our city against boys riding bicycles upon the sidewalks (or skating upon them), should not a law be immediately passed in justice to our citizens, forbidding the custom?

Unjustified Hazing

Speaking for all soldiers, I would like to make public the lack of common sense some of our officers show in handling men.

A man was late coming back from a three-day pass and his battery officer punished him by making him wash a truck with a shaving brush! This sounds unbelievable but it actually happened.

Are we supposed to look up to and respect men like that? This is still America—we're soldiers and not robots. We can take any punishment deserved—sensibly given. But such an idiotic thing as this, it has no place in the Army

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Imaginary Manuscripts

Gentlemen:

Your invitation to come to Casablanca and spend a few weeks has been received and it was very nice of you to think of me. I appreciate it.

I am a little tired and would like a rest and change of climate, but I regret to say that I have so much pressing business in hand that it will be impossible. It is good to know that you boys can drop everything and get away whenever you are in the mood. How I envy you! When I got your invitation it cheered me up immensely as I had thought everybody was all tangled up in fighting the war just as much as I am. It was most reassuring to know that I have as my Allies some who still have so much free time.

In fact I subscribed to your purposes so much that I started to pack. I got in a couple of pairs of socks when I was interrupted by news of a great victory around Natchik. When I was able to resume I was putting in a spare undershirt and some ties when I was called to the phone to hear about a triumph at Millerova. I tried to shake off these events as soon as possible and had packed an extra smock, a pair of utility boots and was debating whether to take along my warm drawers or not when, drat the luck, my generals called me and insisted upon talking about some new drives in the Voronezh-Gorshechinop area.

* * * *

You will understand how difficult it was. It was enough to deter some men from leaving their own country at all, but I am pretty firm. I got back to packing as soon as possible and had stuffed everything necessary into a big black bag when another bunch of generals swept in to get my advice about a big push in the Kharkov area. It was most annoying to want to get away for a while and be constantly hampered by these big victories everywhere. Why, I thought, should all these victories be happening to me? Well, such is fate, comrades.

* * * *

Anyhow this time I grabbed my bag and was about to start for an airfield, eager to see you boys, when what do you think happened? Some of my armies had made long advances on another wide front and wanted to tell me about them. You know how armies are.

* * * *

Well, to be brief, I saw it was useless to try to drop everything in Russia. But I was pretty sore about it and was not good company for anybody for a couple of days. My generals keep informing me of new victories, as the dears do not seem to realize I need to relax. I will just have to stay here in my native land and stand it I suppose.

* * * *

However, I want to thank you again for the opportunity and to say that you have my best wishes, and if there is any way I can help by long distance just let me know. Remember me to Hopkins.

Sincerely yours,
JOSEF STALIN.

As we understand it the United States and England met at Casablanca and voted to accept nothing but unconditional surrender. Russia's position was that it would be glad to help, but preferred not to stop fighting for it.

New York has changed its air-raid signals again. Well, the last ones enjoyed a run of almost seven weeks, which was a new record.

"Why did they change the old air-raid rules?" demanded Elmer Twitchell. "Nobody has solved the old ones yet. They got over 105,000 answers to 'em," continued Mr. Twitchell, "but nobody could tell what they m e a n t, including Kieran."

Joe Stalin—Get me the papers on that Casablanca party. I want to find out everything about the war I'm winning!

Germans Supply Russia

Germany has always been quick to imitate methods and inventions emanating from the United States. Even though she is now at war with us, she is apparently determined not to miss following our good example.

No sooner did our good administrator of the lend-lease administration, Edward J. Stettinius, jr., publish his report to Congress about the thousands of trucks and other vehicles sent to Russia, about the bombers and fighter planes, the guns and ammunition, when, presto chango, Germany too came across with a lend-lease of her own. Of course she is still a bit behind the good U. S. A., but there is hope that around Voronezh, Kharkov, Rostov and a few other less important sectors of the great Eastern Front she will even better the United States by supplying the Red army with plenty of arms and ammunition. It now appears that since January 10 alone the Russians around Stalingrad have helped themselves to 60,454 trucks, 6523 guns, 7341 motorcycles, 744 planes, 1517 tanks, 76,887 rifles and many other items taken away from the Germans. If this goes on, the German lend-lease will soon outstrip the American and British in supplying the fighting Russians. Wouldn't that be a calamity!

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The President's Press Conference

THE QUESTION whether Stalin is in agreement with the plans made at Casablanca is effectively answered by Mr. Churchill's visit to Turkey. The Prime Minister took with him not only his principal staff officers but also high diplomatic officials, and then announced among other things that "consideration also was given to postwar problems, on which agreement was again reached." We may take it as absolutely certain that Mr. Churchill, speaking also for the President, could not have announced such an agreement with Turkey if Russia had not been consulted and were not satisfied with the agreement. For Turkey is the most important of all Russia's western neighbors, and no agreement about the settlement of the war in that part of the world would be conceivable without Russia's approval.

LIPPMANN

Mr. Churchill's mission proves also, if proof were needed, that a strategical plan of action was in fact worked out at Casablanca. What plan, it will be better not to speculate about.

THE PRESIDENT returned to the subject of the future of Dakar which he had already raised after his talks with President Vargas of Brazil. It might just as well be understood, he said, by those who hold Dakar and the West African colonies in general that they must never again be a threat to the Americas.

To whom is the warning addressed? Obviously not to the British For their positions at Freetown, Bathurst, Accra and Lagos have been an invaluable help in the defense of the Americas. Nor to the Fighting French who kept Equatorial Africa in the war, without which it would have been physically impossible to establish the air routes to the Middle East and India. The words must be addressed to the French who held Dakar and Morocco in the name of Marshal Petain, and are now subject to General Giraud. The threat to the Americas came from their territories The threat existed because for over two years after the capitulation in France, we have never been sure that these territories would or could resist Hitler if he insisted upon having them. If Hitler had not made the supreme mistake of attacking Russia in 1941, if he had used even a fraction of his great army in Russia in order to occupy the French African empire, there is small likelihood that the men of Vichy or the men in Vichy would have resisted him.

For even when the American and British armies were already in North Africa, the men of Vichy in Bizerte and Tunis did not obstruct and probably facilitated, the establishment of Hitler's bridgehead. Thus the question of who are the men of Vichy, and therefore our enemies and who were merely men in Vichy, and therefore our potential Allies, is a very serious military matter, and not just "politics" with which we must not concern ourselves. And if the President did not fully realize this, he would not publicly put General Giraud on notice that we are not sure his entourage can be depended upon to remove the threat of Dakar and West Africa to the Americas.

THE EXCERPTS from Mr. Ramsey's interview with General Giraud, which the President read to the White House press conference, throw an interesting light on the situation. Mr. Ramsey reports that "half the population of Algiers still calls de Gaulle 'traitor' because they believe his only reason for coming t Britain was to gain decorations, high rank or money." Mr. Ramsey then reports that General Giraud "said bluntly: 'the British are right to support de Gaulle. He is the only Frenchman who has spoken for two years with the voice of France. I am not only in accord with him, I am one of his greatest admirers as a soldier and for what he has done from London.'" Thus, we now have it on the authority of the President, who placed the Ramsey interview on the record, that General Giraud is governing a population of which half regards as a traitor the man whom General Giraud himself regards as the only Frenchman who has spoken for two years with the voice of France.

This half of the population is obviously an unstable foundation on which to build. It must contain, on the President's own estimate, the defeatists and the disloyal, and those whom they have deluded, corrupted, or terrorized. Their influence is not to be relied upon in making it certain that Dakar and French Africa will never again be the deadly threat they have been for two years to the security of the Americas. And while the influence of this unreliable part of the population is as great as it is, the United Nations are compelled to take quite considerable risks when they build up a French army, as large as our own, in the regions where the allegiance of half the population is so doubtful.

IN DEALING with this situation we are dependent upon whether General Giraud's political judgment is as good as his loyalty is absolute and beyond question. Let us not confuse the matter then by the parrot-cry that General de Gaulle or anyone else is playing "politics" if for the present he exercises some right of independent judgment about political decisions in North Africa. Since half the population under General Giraud's authority is of uncertain allegiance, General Giraud has to make exceedingly difficult political judgments.

It is just as well that as he makes them, there should exist in the person of General de Gaulle a source of independent judgment. In fact it should strengthen General Giraud's own hand in dealing with men under him who might be inclined to drive hard bargains at the expense of General Giraud's principles.

WE MAY then hope that General de Gaulle will discipline those of his followers who are disposed to sulk in their tents, and that he will quickly find a way, if it is possible, to establish a strong liaison with General Giraud. For this is the surest way to see to it that in resorting to the expedients which are necessary, the voice of France is heard as to how expedient and how necessary they are. For many of them—the importation of Monsieur Peyrouton for example—seem debatable expedients when they are first broached; they become necessary, if they are not dealt with quickly, because after a while they have to be carried through in order to uphold the prestige of the authorities who are committed to them.

Thus it is most desirable that General Giraud's judgment should be fortified early, before he gets himself too deeply committed on doubtful matters. This can probably be done best by the presence of men who have proved themselves, who have lived in the free world these 2½ years, not in captive France or in the isolation of North Africa, and therefore may see some great things more clearly.

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX
No. 24
Depreciation (II)

The "useful life" of a property, for Federal income tax purposes, is considered as its term of use for the purpose designed. Complete exhaustion of a property is not required in estimating the annual depreciation, but if it possesses salvage value at the end of the useful life. this value must be taken into account in determining the depreciation rate. Thus, the useful life of a rental building would be its useful rental life, though at the end of that period it may possess scrap or salvage value which must be taken into account. For the guidance of taxpayers, the Bureau of Internal Revenue has prepared a bulletin (Bulletin F) setting forth bureau practice in regard to depreciation deductions and estimated useful life of various types of property.

After the estimated useful life of the property has been determined, the capital sum to be recovered may be charged off over the period. either in equal annual installments or in accordance with any recognized trade practice. The amount so charged off must be used to reduce the cost (plus any additions and betterments) or other basis at which the property is held, and if the property is subsequently sold or exchanged, that reduced basis becomes the adjusted basis for determining the gain or loss on the sale or exchange.

If it is clearly shown that, because of economic or other conditions, property must be abandoned at a date prior to the end of its normal useful life, so that depreciation deductions alone are insufficient to return the cost or other basis, a reasonable deduction for obsolescence may be allowed in addition to depreciation.

As stated above, depreciation allowances are based upon the cost "or other basis." If the property was acquired by purchase after February 28, 1913, the cost is the basis. If acquired by purchase prior to March 1, 1913, the basis is the cost of the property less depreciation sustained prior to March 1, 1913, or the fair market value on March 1, 1913, whichever is greater. If the property was acquired by gift after December 31, 1920, the basis is the same as it would have been in the hands of the donor or the last preceding owner by whom it was not acquired by gift.

While land, as stated above, is not ordinarily depreciable, an allowance corresponding to depreciation, known as depletion, is permitted in the case of mineral property from which minerals (including oil) are being extracted. In the case of certain farming operations, requiring expenditures to maintain the productivity of the soil, such as orchards, where regular replanting must be practiced, or farm land requiring periodic clearing or drainage or application of fertilizer, depreciation deductions to recover the sums expended may be permitted in accordance with the exhaustion of value, if the amount so expended in developing the property for use is treated as a capital expenditure.

Business and Professional Income

Individuals engaged in business or profession report the net profit (or loss) in their individual income tax return Form 1040. The net profit (or loss) is entered in item 9 of the return form and the entry must be supported by the information called for in Schedule H, or by other schedule particularly adapted to the business or profession.

In reporting income from business or profession, all income so derived must be shown in the schedule. In arriving at net income or loss, the taxpayer may use the methods of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books, so long as such method is reasonably consistent and clearly reflects the income.

In the case of farming operations, if the taxpayer is using the cash basis, Form 1040F, "Schedule of Farm Income and Expenses" is required to be filled out and filed along with Form 1040. Use of Form 1040F is optional in the case of farmers who use the accrual method.

It should be noted that incidental transactions entered into for gain, such as the buying and selling of securities where one is not in the investment business, do not constitute "trade or profession." Gain or loss from such operations are reported in item 8 and item 10 of return Form 1040.

Kauffman, Anti-U-Boat Expert, Moved to New Danger Point

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 3.—The naval officer credited with driving Axis submarines out of the Atlantic-Gulf-Caribbean area was transferred today perhaps to a spot where the U-boat is still a definite menace.

The Navy announced that Rear Admiral James L. Kauffman, commandant of the Seventh Naval District and commander of the gulf sea frontier, had been sent to a new post, the nature of which was not disclosed.

The present chief of staff, Capt. H. H. J. Benson, has assumed the post of acting commander of the gulf sea frontier and acting commandant of the Seventh Naval District.

Kauffman came to Miami last June when the ship losses were rising in waters along the South Atlantic Coast, the Gulf of Mexico and the North Caribbean Sea.

His first order was "sink submarines" and he concentrated all his energies on making the sea lanes safe.

So successful was he that Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox commended him. In a letter dated December 5, 1942, Knox cited Kauffman for his "outstanding performance of duty" in his anti-submarine activities.

Kauffman learned the ways of submarines as commander of destroyers in the first World War. He brought his knowledge up to date by an assignment to Iceland during the critical months before Pearl Harbor. He served as commandant of the Iceland naval operating base, guarding the vital North Atlantic route to Great Britain and Russia.

(Admiral Kauffman maintains a residence at 2928 Courtland Place Northwest, Washington, but members of his family currently are staying in Florida.)

Hitler Agent Seized

Newark, N. J., Feb. 3 (INS).—A German industrialist allegedly sent to the United States by Hitler to take over American industry "when Germany won the war" was among seven enemy aliens arrested in 43 raids by the FBI in New Jersey, it was announced today.

Name of the industrialist was not disclosed. Of the others seized five were Germans and one was an Italian.

By the Associated Press

The Navy announced yesterday that survivors had landed in Miami, Fla., from a medium-sized British merchant vessel which was torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine in mid-November in the Atlantic off the northern coast of South America.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Baseball isn't dead yet, but at this writing it seems to be pretty sick. The come-lately clubowners might not recognize the death-rattle, but such as Clark Griffith, who has been around for a long time, know the full significance of a "work or fight" order.

POVICH

That's what stopped 'em in 1918 when Secretary of War Newton D. Baker dished up those two alternatives. Approximately three weeks later, baseball folded. For baseball in wartime, work or fight has the same finality as "strike three!"

The War Manpower Commission, which has commanded all United States males between 18 and 38 to get out of nonessential occupations and get into the Army or war plants, sugar-coated what appears to be baseball's poison dose. "Desirable but not essential," said Paul McNutt, of baseball. That seems to be analagous to the condemned man's hearty breakfast.

The WMC stated it was just warming up when it announced a list of 65 occupations whose workers were nondeferrable, and that there were more lists to come. Eventually the nondeferrable list will embrace hundreds of pursuits, it was stated. There could be little quarrel with the WMC's first step. The likes of Turkish bath attendants and clairvoyants are scarcely essential to the war effort in their present jobs, of course.

The evidence is that by listing the least essential occupations first, the WMC was merely cushioning the public for the shocks to follow. At semimonthly intervals, new lists will be announced, a spokesman said. Before the summer is out, WMC will catch up with professional athletes and actors, it was stated.

Baseball probably won't give up the ghost right way. That the 1943 season will start is certain. It may be July or August before WMC catches up with the game. Baseball won't stop without an official order, because the club owners will never admit that the game isn't a valuable wartime function.

Draft boards dealing with individual cases have not made any allowance for ballplayers or deemed baseball an essential occupation. The other day, a draft board reclassified Outfielder Lou Finney of the Red Sox 1-A when he was called up for examination. As a ballplayer he was ready for immediate induction. But when Finney declared that he was retiring from baseball to work his farm, he was deferred.

Baseball's chief hope for survival would seem to lie with the White House, where First Fan Roosevelt lives. Last January, Mr. Roosevelt tossed a bouquet to organized baseball as a civilian morale builder and the WMC may have to persuade him to the contrary before it dips into baseball's ranks.

Incidentally, baseball can keep a straight face when it claims to be a morale essential, as Roosevelt labeled it a year ago. The game is pretty important, both to civilian and soldier morale. The soldiers in Army camps are far from outraged at the idea that other men are still playing baseball. A feature of the USO service is the announcement of baseball scores. Soldiers and sailors on leave hurry to the ball parks. In any debate, they would cast a heavy vote for baseball.

A new hope that the game might survive the year, was injected into the picture yesterday when Congressman Kilday of Texas introduced a bill to prevent induction of married men with children into the Army. Another Congressman, promising support for the bill, declared "it is not the intention of Congress that men with children should be drafted before all other eligible men have been called."

But that means baseball now must depend on an act of Congress to checkmate the War Manpower Commission. Until such time as married men with children are deferred by congressional action, the WMC can enforce its new order.

The small minor leagues are already doomed, apparently. At the wages they pay, they can't compete with the war plants, even if the talent were available to man the teams. Day by day, big leaguers, too, are retiring from the game in favor of defense jobs, on the theory that the pay will be more regular than in a profession that has to hold out in the face of WMC statements that by the end of the year 10 out of every 14 physically fit men in the country will be in the Army or Navy.

Pieces of Haight:

Pounds Brings Home Steak, But There's a Catch in It

Nothing Editor Endangers His Standing In Maryland Racing Writers by Purchase

Marietta Park, D. C., Feb. 3.

Dear Boss,

I have often dreamed of buying a stake horse, but I never thought I would see the day when I would purchase horse steak. I guess my days as a member of the board of directors of the Maryland Racing Writers will be numbered when the turf scribes find me out, but I took home four horse steaks for dinner. I'll admit it was in the spirit of a joke on the family, like the time my wife ate fried eel that I had slipped in the pan with the chicken and she couldn't tell the difference.

HAIGHT

"I have vegetables and dessert," by wife had said. "You just bring home the meat."

When I put the package on the kitchen table, she asked what kind of meat I had brought and I replied, nonchalantly, "Oh, just some steaks." I escaped further questioning by taking my usual before-dinner position beside the radio with the evening paper in front of me.

I had made up my mind an hour before that the only way to eat horse meat would be to forget that it was such. In fact, I was determined to keep horses out of my mind. I didn't even want to think of Charles Town. Somehow my mind kept straying to horses, but I fought them off and finally became engrossed in the doings of the Russians around Rostov.

The radio was purring along with record music and I had forgotten horses, when Russ Hodges blurted, "In the third at New Orleans, the winner——." I switched off the radio before I got the name of the horse, but a paddock full of Bowie claiming talent popped in my mind and I just couldn't help thinking of those steaks.

But I shook off that mental scene and went back to the paper. I refused to weaken despite the fact that I was getting hungry.

I was doing O. K. too, when our darling daughter came in. She gave her usual, "Hello, Pop" in a rather squeaky voice and I asked, "What's the matter, darling." She replied, "Oh, nothing. I'm just a little hoarse."

It wasn't hard to associate hoarse with horse and that brought my attention to a sizzling sound coming from the kitchen. I passed this test with high honors.

I resolved not to think of horses, but they were thrown right in my face again. Our darling daughter switched on the radio and it was the giddy-up, giddy-up introduction of the Lone Ranger and his "Hi, ho! Silver," that almost got me.

Our model (Mack truck model) son made his appearance and, as usual, hiked right for the kitchen and made his usual predinner inquiry of "what're we having?"

When his mother replied, "individual steaks," he came back with, "Pop must have gotten a raise."

By this time I was fighting myself to keep horses out of my mind. Everything was on the table but the meat, when I strolled into the dining room and my eyes focused on a painting of a hunting scene. I didn't notice the hounds, but those two horses looked as if they were staring at me. I would change ends of the table with the boy, that would solve that.

Well, Boss, the meal started with the last of yesterday's bean soup. The steaks were on the table, however, and so far I hadn't weakened. Furthermore, I was resolved to go through with that horse steak dinner if it killed me.

The phone rang. It was Alan Clarke calling from his Huntington Farm. I knew even the name Clarke meant horses, but I wasn't going to let him interfere with our steaks.

"I just called you up," said Alan, "to tell you that there's a mystery here at the farm. Walter Haight, the colt, has been missing for three days. I turned him out in the big field and he has simply vanished."

Well, Boss, you should try some of my wife's creamed salmon on toast. As ever, POUNDS.

Paul Blawie, Samele Top Shoremen

Cardinals Trail, 30-19 at Halftime; Samele's Set Shots Too Much for C. U.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

Washington College produced a pair of potent scorers in Frank Samele, who tossed in 10 set shots for 20 points and Paul Blawie, a follow-up artist, who tapped in nine rebounds and a pair of fouls, and easily defeated Catholic U., 64 to 42, last night in the C. U. gym.

The Cardinals were far off the form which carried them to two Mason Dixon Conference victories in three games. The Shoremen easily solved C. U.'s attempts at a zone-defense, ran the Cards ragged when they switched to a man-for-man and took advantage of wild and careless passing with Fred Rice, jr., the chief culprit.

Rice started out with a hot hand and had the best of an individual 5-minute scoring duel with Ed Athey which found the Cardinals ahead, 7-6. Here Samele took over, however, and made six of the next seven baskets with shots from the side-court.

The Shoremen were ahead, 30-19, at halftime but were forced to stifle a brief Cardinal spurt in the second half. Johnny Mercak tossed in two quickies, George Nelson a pair and Rice one as C. U. pulled to 34-7, but the Shoremen took a time out and came back a superior club, pulling away and at one time held a 60-33 lead.

Rice tried to press his early hot hand and although he made 16 points he cost his team the ball at least 40 times with wild, hurried shots which had no chance of hitting. Dick Scanlan had an off night, making only five points.

Maryland Game Off; G. W. Travels Today

With Maryland's scheduled game with Virginia tonight at Charlottesville rescheduled for February 15, George Washington will be the only Southern visitor among the District teams as the Colonials leave on a three-game, six-day road trip.

George Washington's 10-man squad, manager, Coach Art Zahn, Trainer George Lentz and Charles Wallace, publicity director, will leave today for Raleigh where they play North Carolina State tomorrow night. They move to Norfolk tomorrow to play unbeaten Naval Training Station, stay over Sunday and play William and Mary Monday at Williamsburg.

Late American Rally Defeats Lynchburgers

Lynchburg College led American University, 29 to 25, at the half last night and the game was tied with only five minutes to go. But a concerted rally led by a couple of Eagle aces did the busines. American won, 6 to 47.

Capt. George Zuras tallied 9 field goals in the second half to run his total points for the game to 26. Bart Fugler, at center, accounted for 27 points during the game to lead the team. Joe Hassick, at guard, did all right for a freshman with nine to his credit.

Lynchburg's Winston Milan almost ran away with the show in the first half. He tossed in basket after basket and foul after foul to lead the visitors to their rest time advantage.

The Eagles play Gallaudet at Eastern gymnasium tomorrow and Randolph-Macon on the home floor Saturday in conference games. American is now boasting a better than .500 percentage for the season; they've won 5 and lost 4.

Hoya Five Meets Test Tonight in Penn State

Tech Gym Is Scene of Struggle Between Nationally Prominent Foes

Penn State College, one of the college court powers of the Nation since Johnny Lawther installed the sliding zone defense in 1938, will test Georgetown's claims to greatness tonight when the Nittany Lions invade Tech gym at 8:30.

Georgetown will have to approach its peak of Monday night's Syracuse game, when the Hoyas turned in one of the finest exhibitions ever seen here, to turn back the Lions. The game likely will decide whether G. U. can stay up or is an in-and-out club, such as its recent loss to Temple indicated.

The Lions virtually have the same team which won 17 and lost 2 in the regular season last year, lost to Dartmouth in the first round of the N. C. A. A. playoffs and then beat Illinois, Big Ten champs, in the consolation.

To date they have suffered three defeats in 10 games, all on the road. The Lions lost to West Virginia by five points, New York U.'s unbeaten Violets in Madison Square Garden by nine and Pittsburgh by one. They have rolled over Washington and Jefferson, Susquehanna, Bucknell, Temple, Syracuse, Carnegie Tech and Colgate.

Georgetown, with perhaps the best material ever to grace the Hilltop, will take a three-game winning streak and a season's record of 12 victories and 2 defeats into a game it must win to stay in the running for post-season tournament bids.

Lawther always stresses height and his present Penn State club is no exception. Outstanding player, high scorer and captain is Herk Baltimore, 6-foot-4 guard, while at center is 6-foot-5 Dave Hornstein. Whitney Von Nieda and rangy veterans Gent and Egli round out the starting line-up. Among the reserves is Jib Lawther, sophomore son of the coach.

Georgetown will have the two leading scorers on the floor in Big John Mahnken with 222 points in 14 games and Andy Kostecka, the short shot artist with 207. In Danny Kraus, the driving guard who could seemingly play basketball 24 hours a day, the Hoyas have the most talked of player in town. Kraus' name has been linked with the best ever to play here on the basis of his season's performances. Billy Hassett, the smooth play-maker and Lloyd Potplicchio will round out the Hoyas' starting lineup while Coach Elmer Ripley has two capable reserves in Danny Gabbianelli and Meigs Reilly.

Penn State will have an edge in height but the Hoyas have shown superior scoring power and speed to date. A Parochial School League preliminary between St. Martin's and St. Aloysius at 7:30. With Tech gym having a limited seating capacity, it is advisable to be on hand early.

Bethesda-C. C. Scores, 27-25, Over Western

A last minute field goal by John Ferry, his only score of the game, yesterday gave Bethesda-C. C. a 27-25 victory over Western High quint on the Bethesda court. The battle found the teams never more than three points apart throughout.

George Van Wagner led the Montgomery County outfit with eight points, Love with nine and Beatty with eight markers led Western.

Howard U. Edges Carolina A. & T.

Howard University's Bisons scored a 46-44 victory over North Carolina A. & T. College last night at Howard gym, fighting off a determined A. & T. rally that threatened to pull the contest out of the fire.

"Moon" Hedges and Bob Smalls led the Bison attack, each netting 11 points. Perry, Butler and Armour tallied 11 points apiece for the North Carolinians.

Penn Wins Ninth Game In 2d Half

Navy Wastes Lead Of 13 Points to Second Stringers; Viguers Is Star

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 3.—After a slow start the University of Pennsylvania found itself in the second half and registered its ninth win of the season by conquering the Naval Academy five 48-47 today.

Navy held command throughout most of the contest but the determined Quakers, paced by Chuck Viguers and Pat Shovlin who accounted for 22 of the total, woke up in the last seven minutes of play to overtake the leaders and go on to win.

At the outset the Middies rolled up a comfortable lead with the aid of its center, Pat Patrick who gathered all of his 10 points in this period to give his team a 22-16 lead at the intermission.

Starting the second session the Middies continued to move ahead and widened the count to 37-24, but the visitors with their second team in the ball game began to narrow the gap. Bill Koehler potted a field goal followed by Shovlin's under the basket heave. Then Viguers found himself and netted three consecutive double deckers.

By this time the Penn quint had drawn to within four points of the Middies. A foul shot by Koehler and field goals by Colberg and Viguers gave the Pennsylvanians the lead.

Stock Prices Drift Lower, Led by Rails

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 3.—Stocks generally drifted lower today, the few resistant leaders failing to generate any real recovery steam.

Rails, steels and motors led the broad decline—475 issues were off against 387 either unchanged or up a bit—and the Associated Press average of 60 stocks lost .2 of a point at 43.9.

Profit cashing accounted for much of the pressure, while there was considerable uncertainty over the situation in the South Pacific, where naval and air fighting was reported in progress and where Secretary Knox indicated, a major battle might be in the making.

Investment demand was credited for the support that in many cases halved losses by the final gong. American Telephone was up a point and Eastman, another blue chip, gained ¾.

Rail shares, some of whose future prospects could be affected sharply by results of the Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on the Price Administration request for a cut-back in rates, were influenced by these possibilities all day. Fractional losers included Santa Fe, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway and Great Northern preferred.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 3 (AP).—A decline of more than 5 cent in rye unsettled other grains today and losses were recorded in all pits at the close.

Although selling of rye was not particularly heavy, demand had dried up and scattered liquidation was able to force fairly substantial price concessions. Wheat suffered from a little hedging pressure and failure of milling demand to develop.

At the close wheat was off ⅝-¾, May, 1.29⅛@1.29⅜; July, 1.30; corn was ⅛-¼ lower; May, 97⅞@97¾; oats slumped ⅝-⅞; rye dropped 1-1⅛ and soybeans held inactive.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Lester Cowan to Produce Film of China as His Next

SMILING FROM EAR TO 'ERE over the public acclaim accorded his latest picture, Lester Cowan, producer of "Commandos Strike at Dawn," the powerfully arresting film now on the Earle screen, has "more of the same" rapidly taking form in the front of his cranium. Not the back, the front.

PAUL MUNI

By "more of the same" is not meant a sequel to "Commandos"—except in the most remote sense—but further pictures contributing something to the spirit that will win the war, translated into cinematic terms that will be as understandable to others of the United Nations as to the United States.

Therein, I think, lies the secret of Mr. Cowan's preeminence among the others of Hollywood's more solid citizens. First, he insists on knowing his subject as nearly from "A" to "Izzard" as is possible, and then expressing it on the screen in universal instead of colloquial terms. Thus, in "Commandos" one never hears the word "democracy" of "freedom" or any inveighing against a specific character in the story, no matter how obnoxious. Terms readily grasped, if not wholly understood, in the United States might be subject to varied interpretations in a variety of other countries, where freedom to the native might mean "slavery" to us.

So Mr. Cowan has Paul Muni, the Eric Torensen of "Commandos, "remark that he thought he was living in a civilized world, but finds he is living in a jungle; and, in comparing his own people and the invading Nazis, that all countries have children—some of them grow up to be good, others grow up to be bad.

This universality of expression in the common language of pictures possibly explains why "Commandos Strike at Dawn" is the first of the current American film productions to be purchased by Soviet representatives in America for exhibition in Russia. This, at any rate, is the practice Mr. Cowan is determined to pursue, with the single proviso that he be not bound around by a tangle of prefabricated production "codes" and official edicts, but that his films be judged and licensed, or not, on the basis of the finished product. It worked magnificently in the case of the "Commandos."

A one-day visitor in Washington this week, Lester told this department many interesting things about his next—or next to next—production. In more or less the manner that "Commandos" was a story of Norway, it is to be a drama of China, with Sun-Yat-Sen its pivotal character. Paul Muni again will be the star, embodying in his portrayal of the pivotal figure the authentic idea that Sun-Yat-Sen once was a part of American life, just like the man next door. The picture, unless it goes awry in the making, will reflect Chinese character to America and American character to China, with a minimum of "Hollywood." It should perform a valuable service for both. There is another topic—and this one is more or less in the back of the Cowan mind and may not be discussed at this time—to which the same sane approach will be made. The farther he gets from Hollywood convention, the better he likes it. "If 'Commandos' could be made successfully 1500 miles from the studios, I don't see why the same thing can't be done 5000 miles away. Our technicians are up to it, even if they do have to work under what are popularly accepted as 'handicaps.'" More power to him.

The Circus Is Coming to Town!

The Shrine Circus, second to be staged in the Capital by the Nobles of Almas Temple, as everybody probably is aware by now, will open a week's engagement in Uline's Arena next Monday night, for the benefit of the Almas charities and activity fund. Despite the overwhelming success of last year's inaugural event, General Chairman Howard P. Foley has redoubled his efforts to make this year's twice as good. During the course of the week, the Shriners will entertain no less than 15,000 persons as their guests. In the neighborhood of 10,000 of these will be the underprivileged, crippled and orphaned children of the District. The approximately 5000 others will be soldiers, sailors and marines from local and nearby camps and bases. This can be made possible only by wide and enthusiastic public support—which ought to supply a double incentive to attend. The show will be worth it. Some of the greatest stars of the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus and other celebrated attractions have been signed to appear for the Shriners, including Winnie Colleano, the Rooney Sisters, Jane Orton, the Les Kimris Aces and the American Eagles. Peejay Ringens, by way of affording a thrill, will dive from a bicycle 70 feet in the air into a 3-foot tank of water. Ten clever clowns and a complete animal section also will be on hand. Hurry! Hurry! Hurry!

For the benefit of those who may be all a-twitter—and everybody should be—about the coming of "Casablanca" to the screen at the Earle, there will be what is politely referred to as an "extended schedule" in effect on Thirteenth Street tomorrow. Doors will open at 9:45 a. m., with the first performance beginning at 10. Five stage shows will be presented during the day, the last complete bill beginning at 9:30 p. m. This, also, is worth it. We already have committed ourself on the superlative excellence of "Casablanca"—not as a great political or historical document, but as one of the rip-snortingest and best of the romantic comedy-melodramas of this or any other season. You'll find out!

"Abolish-the-Dictionary"-Note

"Casablanca" still ought to be two words!

Add Technicolor and Multiply by Ten!

MAUREEN O'HARA

whose studio observes that hers are the "most beautiful eyes in Hollywood." Which is not far wrong, as those who have seen her in Technicolor with Tyrone Power in "The Black Swan," current at Loew's Palace, will testify. But perhaps more important is that she will be seen next with Charles Laughton and George Sanders in RKO-Radio's "This Land Is Mine." Mr. Sanders, of course, is the venomous Captain Leech of the "Swan" number

Mother Helps Out

She doesn't receive screen credit, but Mrs. Carolyn Cagney, James' mother, had a lot to do with Jimmy's dancing in "Yanke Doodle Dandy." Mrs. Cagney knew George M. Cohan well, and is also rated one of the few experts on that late great star's dancing style.

HEDDA HOPPER

It Pays to Grouse!

Hollywood, Feb. 3.—George Sanders knew what he was up to, being surly and sulky. The type roles he plays pays off. Three studios are dickering for him, but Columbia has inside track for "Appointment in Berlin," in which he'll play an Englishman similar to Lord Haw-Haw. England believes he's a traitor, but all the time he's broadcasting from Berlin he's working for his homeland. Studio's hoping by the time the picture's finished we'll be marching into Berlin. . . . Reason Abbott and Costello couldn't make the trip abroad to entertain our soldiers, after all details had been worked out, was because Metro chose this particular time to have them do their one picture a year over there.

IDA LUPINO

Redated His Bosses

When Jean Renoir was directing at Twentieth, he took the same scene over and over again until it was right. He was told that he couldn't do that, so Jean, who made "Grand Illusion" and "Roofs of Paris," said, "That's the way I did these pictures. However, if you don't like the way I direct, I'll resign." They thought it was a good idea, and he topped it with, "I'm happy to resign from Fifteenth Century Fox!" Now I'm told "This Island Is Mine," which stars Charles Laughton, is one of the great films of all time—and Renoir brought it in under schedule.

Lesson in Contrasts

On "Devotion" set I found Curt Bernhardt directing Ida Lupino and Olivia de Havilland as the Bronte sisters in as gentle a bit of family devotion as you can imagine. Ida Lupino tells me she's been eight weeks getting to her death scene. The set was filled with real antiques. They paged a make-up man to dim down a painting on the wall. Its face was too shiny. I asked Ida whether she didn't miss the happy days when she did musicals with Jack Benny. She replied, "I didn't know then how well off I was!" "Yes, but your sadness has brought you world fame, and your salary's been trebled."

All in the Script

Then over to "Old Acquaintance," where the velvet was off the claws of both Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins, Bette turning on Miriam with this line: "If I don't get out of here, I'll do something I'll be sorry for." After which Miriam heaped insults on her, and finished up by screaming, "Well, why don't you go?" At which Bette came back and shook her like a cat would a rat. I thought her back fillings would fall out! But it's a scene you folks will lap up like cream. Miriam had it coming to her.

Sharps and Flats

Nineteen years ago Billy Gaxton sang a song, "All for You," on Broadway. The composer was Arthur Freed, who's now his producer in "Best Foot Forward" . . . Harold Lloyd moved into Columbia as a producer . . Sam Wood moves over there soon as he's finished "Saratoga Trunk," and Arthur Schwartz, song writer, has already been assigned offices—which means an actor, director, and song writer are now producers . . . Ella Morse, Freddie Slack's soloist, is expecting her baby in a couple of months. I met her just after she'd finished a hot boogie-woogie number in "The Sky's the Limit." She said, "I don't know which is more enthusiastic about boogie—my baby or me!" Then added, "I think it's a girl. She dances like one."

Screen Bombardier Goes Blotto Fast

Hollywood.—Quickest switch of the week in Hollywood is that of Arthur Kennedy, good looking Warner Brothers leading man.

A little more than seven days ago Arthur was a grim faced hard-hitting bombardier in "Air Force," super production of American flying fighters in the South Pacific.

Today Arthur, bedecked with Victorian lace and ruffles, is the ne'er do well drunken brother of the Bronte sisters in "Devotion," with Olivia de Havilland, Ida Lupino and Nancy Coleman.

Goes to Dogs; Girls Are Missing

Hollywood. — Jack Carson, who has his brief moments of romance with Joan Leslie in "The Hard Way," but loses her to Dennis Morgan, had rosy visions when he was cast in "Thank Your Lucky Stars." At last he was getting into a musical, where there would be bevies of beautiful girls. But he's moaning now.

"So what happens?" wails Carson. "Do I work with gorgeous girls. I do not. I'm cast in a number with Alan Hale—and a team of husky dogs!"

New York, Feb. 3.

The new super-Cabinet which is to relieve the President of the home-front problems will be composed of Admiral Leahy, Harry Hopkins, Bernard Baruch and Jim Byrnes . . . Former Governor Hurley of Connecticut is Prentiss Brown's deputy administrator at OPA . . . Grace Tully, the President's secretary, accompanied him from Washington to Miami, when he took the plane for Casablanca, and then accompanied him from Miami back to Washington on his return trip—so that not a moment of his working time would be wasted . . . Richard C. Patterson, who has held many Government posts, is being mentioned for the job of Minister of Canada.

EDNA FERBER

Jim Farley will return from Mexico this week, when the fight to elect Ed Flynn's successor as National Committeeman from New York will begin . . . Edna Ferber is recuperating from an operation . . . Jack Trepel, the noted florist, is touring the U. S. O. camp shows as a magician. His wife accompanies him, working as his assistant in the act . . . Maxwell Anderson's destination, as a correspondent, is Liberia . . . Louis Untermeyer's "Treasury of Great Poems" saved a man's life last week. The 3½-pound volume fell on the sleeping Donald Wayne, author of "Fine Flowers in My Valley," now with the OWI. It woke him—and he found his room in flames.

Jimmy Cromwell is writing a second book on Economics. On the day he married Doris Duke, Cromwell wired one of his friends: "I still think that Economics is the most important thing in the world" . . . George Jessel, in discussing a New York author-songwriter, described him as "The dead man's Noel Coward" . . . Harpo Marx will leave this week to entertain troops overseas. He'll be master of ceremonies of the show and do it in pantomime. Harpo hopes to hold reunion with George Bernard Shaw.

Mary Martin, who made her Broadway debut in a minor role for Vinton Freedley, will star in her second show, Freedley's "Dancing in the Streets." Mary's contract allows her to control the billing, the leading man, the script, the star dressing room and costumes for the entire show. Rochelle Hudson, incidentally, will join the cast . . . Billy Rose wanted to test his will power, stopped smoking for five days, but now has resumed. "It made me too clear headed," he explained. "I started remembering things not worth remembering" . . . Ralph Bellamy, Joe Cotten and Dennis Morgan, who watched "Stage-door Canteen" being filmed, now are in it.

Sergt. Sidney Kingsley had to stand inspection at Governors Island Saturday morning, while the First Corps Area's colonels and generals read the reviews of his hit show, "The Patriots," which opened the night before . . . Pvt. Vernon C. Akers, who wrote the lyrics to "Carlson's Raiders," signed the publication contract on Christmas night after his battalion had returned from an expedition in the Pacific. Akers is donating his royalties to Navy Relief and the Recreation Fund of his own Marine Corps.

The story of Putzi Hanfstaengl's working for our Government appeared in the same editions which carried Alexander Woollcott's obituary. In 1916 Woollcott had one of his rare fist fights, with Hanfstaengl, over the latter's allegiance to Germany . . . Woollcott, who was cremated last week, pursuant to his express wish, once discussed the subject briefly during his Town Crier broadcasts, when he commented on inquiries received from listeners. "This week I received a letter asking me what I think of cremation," said Woollcott. He paused, then repeated, mockingly: "What do I think of cremation? . . . Whose?"

Monte Proser, producer of the Copacabana shows, has finished his convalesence and will work in a shipyard at Newburgh . . . The entire action in Alfred Hitchcock's new picture, "Lifeboat," will take place in a lifeboat. There'll be no other sets . . . Sergt. Lee Kamern, former manager of the Astor Theater, reports from Guadalcanal: "We're having trouble with monkeys. They steal everything, and if you've ever thought of a monkey in a tree with a Thompson submachine gun, you can appreciate the hazard. They throw cocoanuts and rocks at the sentries at night. They sit in the trees and peg away, and all you see are the eyes, and you've no way of knowing if it's a monkey WITH a tail or not. Some war."

D. C. Curtails Mobilization ExpansionPlan

Curtailed activities for the Civilian Mobilization units were seen yesterday when the Commissioners in turning over the disbursement of the blackout funds to Civilian Defense Director H. C. Whitehurst, said they would ask for a supplementary appropriation for the mobilization division—but that it would be nowhere near the $155,000 asked by Mrs. Olive Swinney, executive secretary.

This came just a day after Mrs. Swinney had spoken to a civilian defense investigating committee of the citizens associations of a 600 per cent increase in the division's personnel, including 34 new staff members, and a budget jump from $21,000 to $155,000.

The Commissioners official order, issued upon the recommendation of Whitehurst, provides that all civilian defense finances shall be cleared through Whitehurst's office, including payrolls for police service and air shelter personnel, and all bills for purchases and printing.

At the same time, the Commissioners assigned Porter Lumpkins, chief clerk of the Engineer Department, to act as executive assistant to Whitehurst. Lumpkins, who will perform his new duties in addition to his regular District ones, will act as financial officer for the Defense Department.

Each branch of the civilian defense organization, under yesterday's orders must have a property officer who shall be responsible for all Federal and District property used by that branch, and shall be under the supervision of the District Property Inspector. All purchases made for these departments must be made through the District Purchasing Office, on regular requisition forms and must be approved by Whitehurst.

The Commissioners' agreement to request an appropriation for the civilian mobilization units was made to live up to their word of last fall, when Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech advised that the blackout funds could not legally be diverted to this purpose, and the community funds agreed to carry the civilian mobilization to March 1.

However, it was to maintain, rather than to aggrandize an established organization, that the Commissioners promised, and their present attitude indicates that the appropriation they will request will be far short of the amount mentioned by Mrs. Swinney.

Chicago Murder

Police Check Slain Model's Money, Men

ESTELLE CAREY

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Money and men in the life of comely Estelle Carey figured today in the investigation of her murder.

The financial factor was based chiefly on her past association with Nick Circella, alias Nick Dean, racketeer who was sentenced to eight years in prison for conspiracy to extort more than one million dollars from motion picture producers. Dean was an aide of Movie Union Boss Willie Bioff.

Acting on the theory that Miss Carey may have served as trustee for Dean's funds, the police opened her safety deposit box in a Loop bank. They found only $1500 in cash and $250 in war bonds.

Capt. William Drury said the auburn-haired model and dice girl, who was slashed, beaten and burned yesterday in her North Side apartment, may have been tortured before her death. Regarded as possible motives were revenge or a desire to make her disclose some secret.

Against the possibility that a woman may have committed the crime, investigators sought wives or girl friends of men with whom Miss Carey was friendly. The search was based on a batch of love letters, a diary and an address book found among the victim's effects.

Dean's association with Miss Carey bobbed up in the testimony at a coroner's inquest into her death before it was continued to February 24.

Miss Maxine Buturff, who shared the apartment with the victim, stated Miss Carey made as much as $500 a week in commissions while handling a dice game at a night club owned by Dean two years ago. "Evidently," she added, Miss Carey shared the commissions with Dean.

Lawrence Mangano, former Capone gangster and contemporary of Dean in the gambling trade, was questioned during the day and released.

War-Weary Japs Surrender In Response to Broadcast

By William Hipple
Associated Press Staff Writer

Guadalcanal (Delayed).—An encouraging sign was seen here today when a number of Japanese soldiers surrendered voluntarily in response to a broadcast over a loudspeaker from the American lines.

They were the first Japanese on Guadalcanal to give themselves up without compulsion and discredit the legend that all Japanese are ready to fight until death for emperor and country.

These hungry, sick soldiers were definitely discouraged and tired of fighting. They gladly accepted American offers to give them hot cooked rice, cigarettes and good treatment and came in with their hands in the air.

"I was sure I would die," one of the prisoners said through an interpreter. "There was no hope. They have promised us reinforcements and airplanes day after day, but these promises were never kept. My feelings as a true Japanese soldier were gone.

"I didn't want to be a Japanese any more—I wanted to be an American. When I heard the voice from the Americans promising good food and good treatment, I came in."

This prisoner was Pvt. Akiyoshi Hasamoto, 23, of Fukuoka in southern Japan. He said many other Japanese soldiers felt as he did about the war and expressed the belief that many others would surrender in response to broadcasts in Japanese and pamphlets written in Japanese.

Discouraging Sample

Furthermore, Hasmoto said that if Guadalcanal is a sample, he doesn't think Japan will win the war.

The Japanese soldiers were told by their officers on landing, he said, that fighting against the Americans would be easy and it would be easy to take prisoners. He said he soon developed a high respect for American fighters.

Hasamoto readily answered all questions put in Japanese by Marine Capt. Eugene P. Boardman of Fort Atkinson, Wis.

A young carpenter with an elementary education, Hasamoto joined the army in 1940, becoming a member of the Third Battalion of the 124th Infantry which was part of the Eighteenth Division.

His regiment, called the "Oka" unit after its commanding officer, Colonel Oka, was the "best regiment in the Japanese army" until it was mercilessly cut up on Guadalcanal, he said.

Hasamoto said he was a veteran of the China, Borneo, Celebes and Philippine campaigns. His unit was ordered to go to Malaya but the ship Katorima Maru, formerly on the Pacific passenger run, was torpedoed by a submarine.

He arrived by destroyer on the northern coast of Guadalcanal August 31, 1942, and was an artilleryman during the battle of Edsons Ridge September 12 and 13. He said the men returning from the front in this battle reported that American artillery fire was a terrible thing.

At the time of his surrender, his battalion—normally about 900 strong—had been reduced to 230 effectives. He said he was in a pocket which was pounded night and day by artillery.

Japanese officers told their troops that each dead or captured American would have a wrist watch and money and that these were to be turned over to the military police. The Japenese soldiers were permitted to keep clothing, souvenirs and equipment. At no time, Hasamoto said, did he hear any atrocity stories about what the Americans would do to captured Japanese soldiers.

The prisoner said that at no time did he have enough to eat.

He said he had planned to go home, set up his own carpenter shop, get married and have a large family if Japan won. Now, disgraced at home and officially classified as dead, he wants to go to America and build houses.

Nine-Week Hit Again At Little

It can be shouted in the streets, the good news that is even echoed by the noble villagers of the film itself, "The Baker's Wife" has returned! Again to the Little Theater comes this humorous, heart-warming story of human nature—and, we hope, for an extended stay.

Those who have already enjoyed the privilege of seeing this ingratiating film, will probably beat an immediate path to the door of the Little, while others, not so fortunate, will catch on quickly and join the queue which forms to the right—and wound around from there for nine weeks when this subject was first shown at the Little.

With their genius for transposing so successfully to the screen the sun, the stars and the earth, the French have created a film which is profound in its simplicity and hilarious in its pathos. The story in itself is not one that is either tremendously original, nor will it in any way revolutionize the moving picture industry.

Its greatness lies in the delightful performances of the players, led by the masterful acting of Raimu, in the role of the baker, who goes on strike when his wife runs off with a neighboring shepherd. It is rather a tale of man's hunger. A hunger of various kinds. The baker's wife hungers for romance, while his is that of the creative artist hungering for his profession.

Supporting Raimu, and all splendid in their roles, are Ginette Leclerc, as his wife; Charles Moulin, the shepherd; Robert Vattier, the village priest; Robert Bassac, the school teacher, and Charpin, as the marquis.

Egg-Drying Plants Possible in East

College Park, Md., Feb. 3 (AP).—The possibility of developing egg drying plants in the East will be discussed at a meeting February 18 at the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington, Dr. Morley A. Jull, head of the poultry department at the University of Maryland, said today.

Opening of such plants in the East, Jull added, was being considered because of the greatly increased demand for dried eggs. Most of the present plants are located in the Middle West and Southwest.

D. C. Chairmen Put at Ease by Ration Chief

Chairmen of the District's ration boards gathered with the new acting director of the District OPA, Robert K. Thompson, yesterday, many of them prepared to turn in their resignations, but left pledging their support to their new chief.

Just where they had received the impression that they would be asked to resign could not be determined, but at least a dozen of them were ready to resign or receive notice that "the ax" had fallen. One even had his resignation prepared.

Thompson, introduced by retiring OPA Director Whitney Leary, explained that his intentions were exactly the opposite of the apprehensions of the chairmen—that he was counting on them to support him as wholeheartedly as they had supported Leary.

Thanks Chairmen

The retiring director in his introduction thanked the chairmen for "their splendid jobs during trying times" and asked that they support Thompson in the same manner. Spokesmen for the chairmen, in turn, thanked Leary for working with them and, after the explanation that their jobs were not at stake, pledged themselves to support Thompson.

Last night Thompson announced the issuance of a suspension order prohibiting Chester T. Goebel, operator of a filling station at Eighteenth and T Streets Northwest, from dealing in gasoline for a period of 15 days.

Goebel was charged with selling eight gallons of gasoline to a driver whose car bore no gasoline sticker for two coupons which had been detached before the sale from a coupon book which was not issued for the car into which the transfer was made.

The order prohibits Goebel from accepting any deliveries or transfers of gasoline for resale, from trading or dealing in gasoline, and prohibits anyone from delivering any gasoline to Gobel during the period from February 5 through February 20.

Forty-six More Arrested

The District OPA, meanwhile, announced the arrest of 46 more persons for violation of the pleasure-driving ban. This brings the total of arrests to 1088 in the District since the pleasure ban went into effect. Of these, 176 were discarded by District OPA headquarters, 489 were sent to local boards for action, letters were sent to 299 and the remainder were referred to boards outside the District for action.

Commissioner John Russell Young yesterday announced the receipt of message from OPA Director Prentiss M. Brown upholding the necessity and legality of the pleasure-driving ban.

'War Work or Fight' Edict May Hit Hotels and Cafes

News of the War Manpower Commission's "work or fight" directive to employes in nondeferable jobs yesterday found representatives of such occupations in open despair for the future of Washington's "unessentialities."

The local branch of the United States Employment Service reported that there was a rush of registrants yesterday morning but that no figures are available yet on the number that applied.

Harold Barclay, business agent and secretary-treasurer of the Hotel Service Workers Local 80, told The Post that the ruling affects most of the 2045 members of that union, including workers of a dozen large hotels.

"From here, it looks as if our outfit may be forced to close down," he said. "In our union are bellhops, doormen, housemen, elevator boys and starters, and porters, and almost all of them range in age from 21 to 45. That means that few will be excluded from the Manpower Commission order."

Alternatives?

"Women for some of those jobs, of course," he replied, "but they just can't fill in on others—as bellhops or heavy elevator assignments, for example."

He said that hotels have advertised for men from 40 to 75 years old to serve as bellhops and elevator men, but with little success.

Robert Wilson, of the National Restaurant Association, reported that the outlook was almost as dreary for procuring waiters, but that "the ruling is not affecting us as seriously today as it would have a year ago, for Selective Service already has taken such a large toll that we naturally have concentrated on hiring women, older men, and men with physical defects."

A note of optimism came from Claude S. Martin, executive secretary of Bartenders' Union Local 75.

"I don't think that this new directive will hurt us any," he said. "We have lost 41 of our 403 men to the armed forces already, and that just about covers all of our members who are under 38 years old. So far it has been our policy not to admit women bartenders to membership, but if the need for them becomes great, we might change that policy for the duration."

Local 75 takes in approximately 95 per cent of Washington bars, he added.

As for where men in nondeferrable jobs may turn for other employment, John F. Foy, acting deputy director of the WMC regional office here, observed that "finding an 'essential' job is far more than just registering and being assigned a place to work."

"In the first place," he said, "the term, 'war job' is a misnomer. The WMC ruling means a job in essential industry—but obviously a porter in a bomber factory is no more essential than a porter anywhere else.

"When a man registers with the United States Employment Service, his aptitudes, qualifications and experience are considered. Then, if there is no spot for him in the immediate vicinity, a place is found for him via a Nation-wide clearance system that shows just where all types of workers are needed.

"He has until April 1 to register, of course, but we expect that if he wants to attend some sort of training class for an essential job, he should apply early as those courses are filling rapidly. The hours for classes are being arranged so that workers may come in after hours if they would be losing money otherwise."

ment Service.

Activities which are likely to be added to the present list before long (and jobs which will be restricted to older men and to women before long) include the following which Civilian Supply believes are now operating above "bedrock."

Paper manufacturing and printing activities including stationery and writing materials, household paper products, and book printing.

Household furnishings, rugs, furniture, chinaware, pottery.

Personal furnishings, luggage, cosmetics, cleaning items.

Toys, games, sporting goods, recreational activities, beverage manufacturing.

In securing 2.8 million men from nonessential industries, War Manpower officials would be well on the way to meeting this year's requirements. WMC officials hope to provide the 6.4 million additional manpower needed by employing 2.7 million women not working at present, drawing half a million from the unemployed, reducing our unemployed figure to less than one million, and by securing 3.2 million persons from nonessential industries, retail and wholesale trades and services.

Considerable additional manpower may be secured from trade in addition to the 2.8 million from industry, it is believed. It was pointed out that the country has a larger retail and wholesale distributive system than it needs in view of the greatly reduced supply of goods.

This is particularly true in the gasoline business, which has been reduced drastically by rationing.

Lewis Asks $2-a-Day Rise For Coal Miners

Bituminous miners received a wage boost averaging $1 a day a year ago raising their basic wages to $7 a day in the North and $6.60 in the South. Anthracite miners, whose wages run somewhat lower, received a flat 10 per cent boost. The "Little Steel" yardstick allows for increases up to a maximum of 15 per cent above January, 1941, levels, but the War Labor Board has allowed larger boosts to correct inequalities and gross inequities.

However, Lewis, who caused the downfall of WLB's predecessor, the National Defense Mediation Board, over the "captive mine case," made it clear that he felt WLB was intent on rigid application of the yardstick to his case.

Lewis acknowledged that his demands would increase coal prices "a moderate amount," but added "it is impossible to prevent increasing prices."

"Only the worker is left in the lurch," he declared.

Executive Branch Probe Ordered

the face of global war demands, concurred with Ludlow, who said the House group was in a position to assert wholesome and effective national leadership by "initiating an economy drive" that will return control of the purse strings to Congress.

The resolution creating a special House committee of five to inquire into any "action, rule, regulation, procedure, order or directive" that is "beyond the scope of the power or authority granted by Congress or the Constitution to such agency or to the "Executive" was sponsored by Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat) of Virginia.

Smith is a leader among the conservative Democrats. Often marked for defeat in elections by New Dealers, Smith conducted an investigation for the House in President Roosevelt's second Administration that resulted in a shake-up and reorganization of the National Labor Relations Board.

"Congressmen have been receiving many complaints about executive bureaus and departments going beyond powers granted them in laws passed by Congress," Smith said. "The charges are that through regualtions and interpretations the agencies are asuming powers to legislate."

Broad authority for the committee to subpena witnesses and materials and to make recommendations to Congress was contained in the measure.

Plan Studied To Ease Load On Taxpayers

under the increased schedules voted by Congress last year.

Randolph Paul, general counsel of the Treasury, said the plan was worthy of "very serious consideration," and added that it was being discussed by the Treasury and the staff of the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue.

Ruml will meet the committee at 10 a. m. to describe his proposal for shifting millions of Americans to a pay-as-you-go system of income tax collections by forgiving one year of their tax liability.

The chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, he is slated to move into the witness chair, where, for the past two days Paul has been presenting evidence to show that the Ruml plan would be a 10-billion-dollar blow at the Treasury. The two men are personal friends, but opponents on how to settle the pay-as-you-go issue.

It will be Ruml's first visit to describe his plan to the House Ways and Means Committee as a group. He told the Senate Finance Committee about it last fall, after the House tax hearings were finished.

Paul, through a full day of questioning, held to the Treasury contention that a pay-as-you-go system of income tax collection would be started as soon as possible without forgiving any more taxes than would be necessary to relieve hardship cases.

Representative McLean (Republican) of New Jersey asked whether the Federal Government would not be willing to make some concession in order to get its collections of income taxes on a current basis. The 10 billion which Paul contended the Ruml plan would cost the Government, "might not be too much for the Government to pay to get tax collections on a business-like basis," McLean argued.

"I don't think we have to pay for that benefit by the complete cancellation of 1942 taxes," Paul replied.

Representative Dingell (Democrat) of Michigan sided with Paul, and asked the source of the pressure to cancel 10 billion in tax liabilities.

Paul declined to answer directly, but said "it's perfectly apparent" the greatest benefit of the Ruml plan would go to the highest income brackets.

Representative Camp (Democrat) of Georgia suggested that the Ruml plan would create a large class of war-contract millionaires. Paul agreed but said he could not estimate how many.

Later, however, Representative Robertson warned that there was danger of "poison" in trebling and quadrupling income taxes.

D. S. C. Given Maj. Al Key, Air Hero of '35

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 3.—Maj. Al Key of Meridian, Miss., noted endurance flier of 1935, today was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross—second only to the Congressional Medal of Honor—for "extraordinary heroism" in a bomber mission over Europe.

Major Key and his brother Fred, who is now a captain in the United States Air Force, set a flight record of 653 hours 34 minutes in the monoplane "Ole Miss."

The citation said that Major Key on his way to bomb Romilly-sur-Seine, December 20, was attacked, head on, by two Nazi planes, and with "great courage and skill" he aimed his Flying Fortress directly at the attackers so that a cannon shell hit the rear of the bomber instead of the vital front cockpit.

The blast severely damaged the aircraft, killed one waist gunner and wounded another, but despite the "desperate situation," the citation said, "Major Key kept the almost uncontrollable aircraft in formation" and "with complete disregard of his own safety" completed the mission and returned safely.

"The action undoubtedly resulted in saving the lives of the crew," it said, "and instilled in the men of his command inspiration that will prove invaluable in future combat missions."

College Head Sent to Prison For Attack on 7-Year-Old Girl

Sentencing Follows Plea of Guilty to Reduced Charge

Toledo, Ohio, Feb. 3 (AP).—Walter Kilpatrick, 29, president of Cedarville College at Cedarville, Ohio, and an ordained Presbyterian minister, was sentenced to an indeterminate term in the Ohio Penitentiary today after pleading guilty to a charge of felonious assault involving a 7½-year-old girl.

The plea was accepted by Judge Lee N. Murlin after Prosecuting Attorney Thomas H. O'Connor agreed to nolle an indictment of assault with intent to rape. The attack occurred in a hotel room here, January 11, after Kilpatrick had met the girl in a park.

J. S. Crutchfield, a director of Western Theological Seminary at Pittsburgh, who appeared on behalf of Kilpatrick, told the court he had known the man eight years and that Kilpatrick had been considered for president of the seminary.

Attorney Lehr Fess, representing the defendant, asked probation for Kilpatrick, claiming he was a victim of a nervous disorder and could be restored to society as "cured" after treatment in a sanitarium. The probation was opposed by Joe Rhinefort, assistant prosecutor, who said this case was one of the "most degrading" in the history of Toledo. He asserted the prisoner was a dangerous person and should not be permitted to be at large.

Kilpatrick, who became the youngest college president in the Nation upon his appointment to the Cedarville post in 1940, recently was granted a leave of absence to aid in promotion of a European student relief fund and was on a lecture tour at the time of the alleged assault.

Nye Attacked for Indorsing Steuben Chief

By Dillard Stokes

Post Staff Writer

Gerhart H. Seger, former anti-Hitler Reichstag member, scored Senator Nye of North Dakota yesterday for Nye's indorsement of the Steuben Society and some of its leaders.

Seger became an American citizen last year. From time to time he has warned of pro-German sentiment in the Dakotas. Nye attacked Seger for this warning recently, when he rose in the Senate to assure his colleagues that he was not afraid of anything that might come out in the Nazi network conspiracy case.

"I cannot accept Mr. Nye as an expert on Nazis," Seger told The Post. "In his address, Mr. Nye devoted some time to a eulogy of Theodore Hoffman, president of the Steuben Society, whom he called 'one of the finest American citizens' he ever had known.

Says He "Waited Upon Hitler"

"Well, this fine American citizen in 1936 headed a delegation of Steubenites who waited upon Hitler in his berghof at Obersalzberg, to pay their respects to the ideology which has been faithfully retailed by the Steuben News throughout the United States.

"Either the Senator was fooled by Mr. Hoffman or he agrees with him. In either case his speech demonstrates that he does not know a Nazi when he sees one."

Seger asserted that in 1940 Hoffman started a campaign to raise $10,000 for an investigation of British propaganda, at a time when the Steuben News was reprinting speeches by Goebbels.

"Nevertheless, there are many local units of the society which are above suspicion," Seger qualified, "just as there are hundreds of thousands of loyal German-Americans. But Senator Nye does not disprove the nazism of disloyal German-Americans by pointing to those who are above reproach."

One of the defendants in the Nazi network conspiracy is the German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, whose propaganda machine circulated 25,000 Congressional Record reprints under Nye's frank during 1941.

Hoffman Speech Circulated

Also circulated under Nye's frank was a speech by Hoffman, the Steuben leader, which Nye had inserted in the Congressional Record.

Seger was born in Leipzig in 1896, entered the German army when he was 19 and fought three years in World War I, entering the Luftwaffe shortly before the armistice. After a career as a newspaperman, he was elected to the Reichstag in 1930 and was still fighting nazism there when Hitler seized power in 1933, when he was sent to a concentration camp.

Escaping after a few months, he addressed the British Parliament and spoke extensively in Poland, Czecho-Slovkia, France and other countries, warning of the war that was to come. He made the United States his home in 1935.

Prof. Allen Dies On Patrol Mission

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 3 (AP).—Prof. Edgar Allen, 50, one of the Nation's outstanding investigators on female sex hormones and chairman of the department of anatomy at Yale University's School of Medicine, died today while sailing in Long Island Sound off Pine Orchard.

Yale authorities, making the announcement, said that Professor Allen succumbed to a heart attack while doing volunteer work aboard a U. S. Coast Guard auxiliary patrol craft. In the fall of 1941, he was awarded the Baly medal from the Royal College of Physicians in London.

Ohio Votes Time Change

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 3 (AP).—The Ohio Senate after nearly two hours' debate voted 22 to 8 yesterday to turn back the clocks an hour by changing the State from Eastern war time to Eastern standard time.

The Senators refused, however, to approve an emergency clause to make the change immediately. The slower time would be adopted 90 days after the bill is signed by the Governor, or some time in May.

The House held a special meeting to receive the measure and rushed it to its judiciary committee.

Coverall Suit, Immune To Gases, Recommended

Boston, Feb. 3 (AP).—A coverall suit which would protect civilian defense workers from mustard, lewisite and other "blistering gases" was recommended today to the inter-regional training conference of defense officials by the Massachusetts committee on public safety.

The suit was designed by Theodore C. Sargent of Swampscott, State gas officer, and Frederick H. Frost of Portland, Me. They also have developed pads of white "detector paper" for air raid wardens and gas officers. The paper turns to bright blue when exposed to blister gases.

Jake the Barber Gets 10 Years in Whisky Scandal

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Feb. 3 (AP).—John (Jake the Barber) Factor, internationally known Chicago financial promoter, was sentenced yesterday to serve 10 years in a Federal penitentiary and to pay a $10,000 fine for his part in the so-called "million dollar" whisky warehouse receipts case.

When asked by Judge Robert Bell whether he had anything to say, Factor, who was sobbing, said he made his plea of guilty because his own safety had been threatened as well as that of his family.

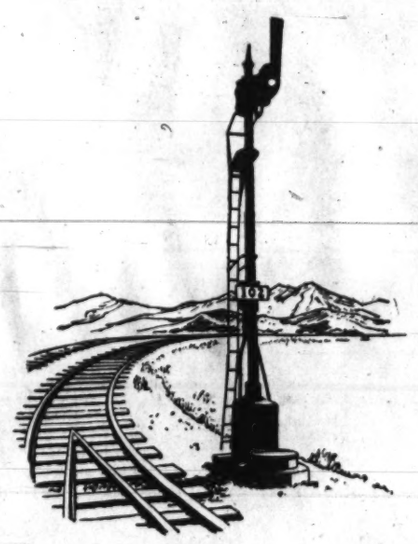
"I was told I would be killed upon entering his courtroom," he said.

Judge Bell told Factor that "if your plea of guilty was for that reason, I am very sorry. That did not justify such a plea."

Thomas McMeekin, defense attorney, said Factor had returned between $15,000 and $16,000

Santa Fe

reports to its passengers and shippers on its first year of war operation



About this time every year, it is customary for Santa Fe to report on the condition of this railroad to its owners, the stockholders of this company.

This year, Santa Fe feels the need of making an additional report—not only to the stockholders, but also to the people who have helped us accomplish the biggest job we have ever had.

Santa Fe salutes them and thanks them.

This report is built around good, old-fashioned American sportsmanship.

During 1942, Santa Fe moved 79 per cent more passenger miles . . . and 122 per cent more freight ton-miles . . . than in 1918, during World War I.

And all this was done with 26 per cent fewer locomotives than we had in 1918.

These figures indicate the greatest volume of business we have ever handled.

They also indicate why you may have experienced some difficulties and inconveniences in traveling or shipping by train during the past year.

Crowded Trains

If you had difficulty obtaining reservations, or had to stand for a portion of your trip—we were just as concerned as you were over any inconvenience it may have caused you. And we mean it!

Our passenger traffic volume was up 102 per cent last year as compared with 1941. Gasoline rationing, in our territory, will increase that volume even more this year.

The Santa Fe must handle this additional load with its present passenger cars, as no new cars will be built during the war.

Late Trains

We hate late trains, too! . . . and we are sorry if they have caused you to miss a connection or an important meeting.

In these days of unprecedented passenger volume it is not always possible to maintain schedules with on-time regularity . . . and since military trains have the right-of-way over everything else, they often cause our regular passenger trains to be delayed.

At many stations along the line, mail and express are heavier than in normal times—and take longer to load. This is another reason why trains are delayed.

Dining Car Service

We regret if you had to stand in line for a seat in the diner—and we honestly wish we could correct this situation.

Five and more settings per meal are frequently required in our dining cars in these days of limited equipment and crowded trains, whereas two settings used to be enough.

Car Shortage

Mobilizing cars necessary for troop movements has caused a shortage of cars at some points on the line.

Special troop trains are becoming almost routine on the Santa Fe. In just one case, we moved an entire division from one camp—and it took 55 complete trains to handle the men and equipment.

We must also keep our passenger cars in constant service to handle the increased traffic all over the line. For this reason, we cannot always concentrate extra cars at any one point.

Freight Cars

Due to the submarine menace and the diversion of freighters to other services, almost all of the intercoastal freight tonnage formerly handled by ships through the Panama Canal was hauled by the railroads in 1942.

Export freight moving to Pacific ports from eastern United States over the Santa Fe in 1942 increased 374% over 1941!

All this brought about an unusually heavy demand for Santa Fe freight cars . . . increased considerably the average length of haul . . . and occasionally caused delays in delivering empty cars at some loading points. It also indicates Santa Fe has many busy months ahead.

Keep 'Em Rollin'!

Please remember there's only one thing we want to do more than keep trains on time and supply cars as promised—and that's keep troops and war freight on their wartime schedule. And we know that's the way you want it!

The record traffic we handled last year was made possible not only by the wholehearted cooperation of our patrons and employees, but also by the harmonious attitude of the Army and Navy, the wise direction of the ODT, and the help from the Interstate Commerce Commission's Bureau of Service.

Equipment Shortage May Force Extra Shifts

The shortage of equipment—typewriters and other office machines—may force the Government to work on a two-shift and even a three-shift basis. Half a dozen large offices are planning additional shifts. Treasury's plans in this direction were explained to the House Appropriations Committee by Charles Bell, administrative assistant, testified that "we are now making studies of two shifts of personnel, and in some places three shifts in order to get along with the equipment we now have. We cannot buy typewriters and we haven't been able to for six months. We have surveyed every piece of equipment in the Treasury Department. We have thus far located 2000 typewriters that could be reassigned, but they will not begin to meet our needs. By March 15 we are going to require considerably more equipment."

Former Representative Will Rogers of Oklahoma, who was defeated for reelection last November, has been appointed a staff investigator for the Ramspeck Committee that's inquiring into Federal personnel practices. He'll assist Dillard Lesseter and he'll get $6000 a year. Rogers, however, is also a candidate for House doorkeeper . . . Jim Brackett has been appointed deputy director of the Office of War Information. He is a former Associated Press reporter and he served on the publicity staffs of half a dozen Federal agencies . A distribution division has been created in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Dr. Walter T. Crowder is chief.

MARTIN DIES: You have again demanded that David Saposs David Lasser and several others whom you describe as Reds and crackpots be fired from Government. You may be interested in learning that the Civil Service Commission has made costly and exhaustive investigations of most of the persons you accuse and the commission okayed them before they were hired. . . . ELMER DAVIS: Now that you're going back on the radio for Government sponsired talks, who's going to censor your remarks or is it possible for the remarks of the chief censor of Government talk to be censored? . . . FEDERAL OFFICIALS: When the independent offices appropriation bill is reported to the House next week it may carry a provision limiting the use of official autos.

That old rumor about Federal employes being frozen into their jobs has popped up again. Indiscreet supervisors apparently are the cause of it all. They threaten the freeze—something over which they have no jurisdiction whatever—when employes submit their resignations. War Manpower alone has the authority to "stabilize employment and it has no plans to apply its employment formula to the Federal service here. Stabilization of Federal workers here hasn't even been discussed seriously. In areas where the employment of war workers has been stabilized, such as Detroit and Cleveland, Federal employes have been included. Moreover, there isn't any such animal as a job freeze. Jobs are stabilized which means that the United States Employment Service must approve transfers and resignations. If the overtime bill hadn't passed when it did Federal employment here unquestionably would have been stabilized.

An unnoticed McKellar bill that would play hob with the Federal service would order the closing of Federal officers outside of the District that weren't approved by Congress . . . A blood donor unit will be set up in the gigantic Pentagon Building. Doctors will be on duty daily. A quota of 40 pints of blood daily has been fixed . . . Treasury has 70,000 employes but Secretary Morgenthau requested the permanent deferment of not a single one. That's somethig of a record. Sixty-four have been given temporary deferment; 36 for six months, 22 for three months and 6 for two months . . . Un-American charges have been leveled at 30 Treasury employes in the past year. Each case was investigated and not enough evidence was found to warrant disciplinary action in a single case.

The cost of decentralization must be enormous. Public Debt Service officials estimate that it it has cost $23',000 additional to operate in Chicago during the last six months. They confess, too, that it has become necessary to duplicate work here than's being done in the Chicago office. Moreover, the move has cost the Secret Service an additional $100,000 . . . Treasury's Bureau of Disbursements has eight offices in South America and two in Canada to pay salaries to Federal workers in those countries. The bureau has 1403 employes and last year 999 quit for one reason or another. Over all, Treasury's personnel turnover is 60 per cent, which is somewhat under the general Government average . . . Since the war the Treasury has received donations aggregating $3,163,000 from patriotic citizens.

An Ounce of Prevention—

Peoria, Ill. (A.P.).—Firemen broke into Dowell Kimmel's apartment to prevent a fire, not to extinguish one. Kimmel was visiting 100 miles away when he suddenly recalled he had forgotten to turn off the electric iron in his apartment. He telephoned the Peoria fire department. Firemen forced a window and turned off the power.

Signs of the Times

Hartland, Wis. (A.P.).—Walter Brown of this town was drafted into the Army.

His wife sold some of the furniture, stored the rest, leaving their home here vacant.

Then she went back to the home, placed a service flag in one window and a "for rent" sign in another.

Winter Registration at G. W. U.

ADVICE TO NEWCOMERS—With winter registration under way this week at George Washington University, Eileen Shanahan, Jean Connor, Alice Newcomer and Louise McNutt were on hand to give advice and information on training for war jobs. Easter Holiday Is Assured D. C. Schools

District school children will be given the usual Easter vacation despite recent suggestions that it be denied them to compensate for the loss this school year of time because of various war registrations, the Board of Education decided yesterday, approving also that the schools be closed the entire week of February 22 when registration for War Ration Book No. 2 will be held.

For the first time in many weeks since the issue was settled definitely, reference was made to the alcohol-narcotics sections of the school health course when Dr. James B. Cannon disapproved the book "Your Health and Safety" for use in the schools on the grounds that it did not conform to the course as now being taught here. Another book, "one of many" that have been given Dr. Gannon's approval, will be used instead.

Authorization was given by the board to transfer of teachers from the senior high schools to the junior high schools when there exists in the former an excess of teachers in any subject and a shortage of instructors in the same subjects exists in the junior high schools. No immediate transfers are being contemplated by the board, however.

Receipt was announced of the second payments of Federal funds amounting to $40,627 for the national defense training program and $42,602 for cooperative vocational education allotments under the George-Dean program.

Miss Bertha Taylor, formerly head of the Health School, was assigned to the office of administrative principal to First Assistant Superintendent Robert L. Haycock until June 30, or at least until the return of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, now on sick leave.

The annual meeting of the board with various civic organizations on the 1944 school budget estimates will be held at 8 p. m. February 18 in the Thomson School.

Lady Calls on Tired Workers To Resist Dictates of 'Beast'

A little old lady, fresh from an unhappy experience in a crowded streetcar where she apparently got caught in a frantic rush for seats, walked into The Post yesterday to ask if Washington men regarded good manners as bad taste.

Her question was passed along to a psychologist, who placed the whole problem under a twin complex of frustration and aggression—frustration experienced by thousands of office workers here who feel like they're getting nowhere fast, and aggression which springs, once they are released from the caves in which they toil, from the American go-getter temperament blended with the nobody-is-going-to-put-anything-over-on-me attitude.

This aggressive spirit, it was explained, really goes into full operation when the frustrated individuals start looking for transportation home—hence the shoving, crowding and what not.

Search for a remedy produced the suggestion that streetcars be staffed with symphony orchestras free to work their soothing effect on homeward-bound workers, and that a full-dress symphony be located, 24 hours a day, at Fourteenth and G Streets Northwest, where inexperienced observers have been deluded into believing that most of the million and more residents hereabouts were trying to get on the same streetcar at the same time.

More practical were these do's and don't's advanced by public transportation patrons: Don't hit an old lady from behind simply because she is beating you to a seat; give an old lady a seat if you're a gentleman and accept the glares of the other male passengers in your stride; don't crowd the motorman through the windshield unless he pokes you first, and don't take your general frustration out on the general public.

Just to prove there are two sides to this discussion, another lady called The Post last night to let it be known that she will banquet the polite man who pursued her to return a streetcar pass knocked from her hand when she alighted from a bus Monday night at Eleventh Street and New York Avenue Northwest.

The gentleman in question is asked to phone the lady at Lincoln 6104.

Turnage Postpones Army Uniform Case

The scheduled hearing of Edward Page Gaston, 74-year-old prohibition crusader, arrested January 13 on a charge of illegally wearing a United States Army uniform, was postponed yesterday by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage until Friday.

The postponement was granted after Gaston submitted a brief to the commissioner which he claimed would prove he was wearing the Army uniform with the permission of the War Department.

Woman Kills Self Over Separation

Separation from her husband was blamed last night for the suicide yesterday of Mrs. Billie K. Wade, 40, of 228 Tenth Street Northeast. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

She was found unconscious in her apartment by another resident about 4 a. m. Gas was escaping from four burners on top of a stove and from oven jets. Mrs. Wade was dead when a doctor from Casualty Hospital arrived.

Nurseries Not All Up To Standard

Parents Urged Are to Check With Health Department Before Enrolling Children

By Margaret A. Lang

Post Staff Writer

A number of Washington day nurseries caring for the children of warworkers are substandard, The Post found yesterday in attempting to learn what such nurseries are or could be doing to help warworking mothers.

Neither the staffs nor equipment of these nurseries meet standards set by the District Department of Health or the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor.

While the majority of the 32 District day nurseries licensed for more than five children are adequate, few are of a high caliber and several are below the level desired by child-care experts.

A Department of Health official yesterday urged parents to inspect personally any school in which they are considering placing their child, pointing out that even if the nursery can produce a Commissioners' license, many of these were issued years ago.

Unless the substandard nursery is flagrantly violating health or safety laws, the Department of Health hesitates to ask that they be closed, because of the tremendous war demand in the District for day nurseries.

A number of other factors are responsible for the situation today.

In 1924 it became unlawful, under an order issued by the Commissioners, to establish or maintain a day nursery, boarding house, home or other place within the District for the reception, board, or care of children under 15 years of age, without first obtaining a permit from the Commissioners through the Board of Health.

Violation of this order is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of $200 for the first offense and $500 for the second and each subsequent offense.

Only in the past two and a half years have social workers in addition to Department of Sanitation inspectors been required to approve a day nursery before the license was granted by the Commissioners.

Before this time, a Department of Sanitation inspector's approval was sufficient—approval by an inspector equipped to judge plumbing but not child-care methods.

While it is easy to refuse to issue a license, revoking one is a difficult and expensive proposition, requiring that proof be established that the children's health, welfare, or safety are being endangered. This covers violations of safety laws but is not much help where child-care standards are being violated.

Some 786 children are being cared for in the 32 District day nurseries and both the good and the bad have long waiting lists.

(Tomorrow's article will tell what is being done by District child-care officials to expand and improve conditions existing in local day nurseries.)

Fire Captain, Detective Get Retirement

Trips which both men planned for their days of retirement have been knocked in the head by the pleasure driving ban, reported Fire Capt. Cornelius F. Sullivan and Detective Sergt. Thomas Nally, after learning yesterday that their retirements, terminating a total of 75 years of public service, had been approved by the District Commissioners.

But, they indicated, foregoing the trips would not interfere with the long rest which each feels he has earned.

Capt. Sullivan, 64 today and in active command of No. 13 Truck Co., joined the fire department in 1903, was promoted to sergeant five years later and to lieutetnant in 1915. In 1923 he was awarded a ribbon decoration for "extraordinary service" after the collapse of the Knickerbocker Theater roof, and two years later received a Commissioners' commendation for service at the Kann's Warehouse fire. He was made a captain following this fire.

Captain Sullivan resides with his wife and 17-year-old daughter, June, at 1303 Staples Street Northeast. A son, Thomas, 19, is in the Navy.

Sergeant Nally, gray haired and kindly ace Police Department investigator, will turn in his badge and gun on March 31 under the 64-year retirement order.

Tansman, National Symphony Register Triple Triumph Here

By Ray C. B. Brown

National Symphony Orchestra plays its 93rd mid-week concert on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Conductor: Hans Kindler. Guest conductor: Alexander Tansman. Program: Grave and Allegro from Organ Concerto in G major (Bach-Kindler), Symphony in D minor (Schumann), Symphony No. 5 in D (Tansman), Polish Rhapsody (Tansman).

Alexander Tansman, who 15 months ago in the Library of Congress was awarded the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge medal for distinguished services to chamber music, received last evening another Washington accolade, this time from the public, when he conducted the first local performances of his fifth symphony and his Polish Rhapsody. A Wednesday night subscription audience listened attentively to his latest symphony (composed in California during the winter of 1942), broke the no-applause-between-movements rule by clapping the scherzo, recalled him thrice at the end, and gave him a hearty ovation after the Polish Rhapsody. It was a triple triumph for the music, the composer and the conductor.

TANSMAN

By the barest of margins, Washingtonians lost the symphony's premiere, which took place in Baltimore the previous night, but the orchestra probably played the work all the better for that experience, and it was not, after all, a case of our loss being Baltimore's gain. Second performances often improve the impact of unfamiliar music, and the players seemed last evening to be completely in the vein of spirited interpretation. Under Mr. Tansman's precise and authoritative direction the symphony was presented in proper perspective as a stimulating and significant work in the medium of absolute music, having no ideational program.

Long ago Mr. Tansman emerged from the early influences of Chopin, Strauss and Skryabin and developed his clear individuality of style. In the symphony there are some traces of the scoring technique of Stravinski and even a reference or two to the jazz idiom of Gershwin, but these are matters of passing interest in a work marked by originality of themes, harmonic boldness, rhythmic incisiveness, contrapuntal ingenuity and lyric poignancy. The traditional four-movement form is observed with some intriguing plastic modifications, and the melodic exposition is accomplished by fascinating devices of polyphony and counter-rhythms.

The use of the brass section is remarkable, now standing out in challenging golden patterns, now muttering in repressed passion, and now doubling with the strings in curiously lambent colors. In the Intermezzo movement one is conscious of atmospheric tensity attained solely by the scoring and not by emotional pressure. The scherzo chatters wittily with epigrammatic brevity of themes and has an engaging humor. Coherence if the work is secured by closing the finale with the impressive slow theme of the opening movement sustained on the insistent pedalpoint of the D tonality.

The Polish Rhapsody, "dedicated to the defenders of Warsaw," has an infectious quality in its sombre, militant and jubilant moods. Here the composer has openly borrowed in several places Stravinski's pounding rhythms, but to quite another purpose than the Sacre du Printemps. Notable in this work is the funeral march, which gradually turns into a triumphal procession, as though it were a victory to die in resistance to evil, and the vital expression of freedom in a rousing polonaise.

Before resigning the podium to the guest conductor, Hans Kindler gave us his excellent transcription of two movements from the G major organ concerto that Bach arranged from music by Duke Johann Ernst of Saxe-Weimar, and an eloquent reading of Schumann's D minor symphony that brought out its poetic impulsiveness and its imaginative flights so suggestive of Coleridge.

Mrs. Randle Says Slaying 'Accidental'

Wife of Sportsman Moves for Release On Bail; Gunplay Blamed on 'Slight'

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 3.—Pretty Helen Aileen Randle moved through her attorney tonight to obtain release on bail pending grand jury action on charges she fatally wounded a high school boy and shot her wealthy horseman husband after the youth made a slighting remark.

RANDLE

Mrs. Randle, 31-year-old third wife of Ulmo S. Randle, 34, chief petty officer in the Coast Guard, was arrested after Allen Willey, 17, Annapolis High School student, died Sunday in a hospital of an abdominal bullet wound inflicted with a small caliber rifle.

Willey's death occurred less than 24 hours after the shooting at the large home maintained by the socially prominent couple at Bay Ridge, near Annapolis. County Police Sergt. Brooke Meade said Mrs. Randle told him the shooting was accidental.

Circuit Judge Ridgely P. Melvin said Mrs. Randle's attorney, George B. Woelfel of Annapolis, had requested permission to file for his client's release. Judge Melvin said, however, that he could not hear the petition in the absence of State's Attorney Marvin I. Anderson, who was out of town.

Mrs. Randle's father, Henry Boswell, of the 1300 block B Street Southeast, Washington, was expected here today to seek his daughter's release.

Randle yesterday said that his wife flew into a jealous rage when young Willey, an accomplished pianist, referred to her hands as "dishpan hands." Randle said his wife apparently held a grudge against the youth and sometime ago she struck him on the head with a shoe. He also said that she shot at him, Randle, in their home about two weeks ago with the gun that killed Willey. The bullet missed, he said.

Randle, whose thoroughbred jumpers have won awards in horse shows, still was in the hospital because of the bullet wound in his left leg. The horseman divorced his second wife in 1939 and married the present Mrs. Randle about two years ago.

Sergeant Meade said "the whole thing started over a family spat—something that could have been settled between man and wife without coming to blows."

He added that when he arrived at the home, Mrs. Randle was smiling and "insisted the shooting was an accident." Trial Magistrate James G. Woodward ordered her held for grand jury action on charges of murder and attempted murder.

Mrs. Leonard R. Stinchcomb, jr., who was in the room when the two men were shot, was held under bond as a material witness. Meade said she testified at the hearing before Magistrate Woodward that "young Willey said something that no woman would stand for, it was something I don't care to repeat."

Mrs. Randle is a native of The small community near Waldorf, Prince Georges County. She attended the University of Maryland and was graduated from Brenau College, Gainesville, Ga.

Funeral services for young Willey will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Annapolis.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Addison H. Willey.

The Willeys have three other sons—Donald, who is in the Navy; Douglas, a student at the University of Maryland, and Addison, jr., a student at Annapolis High School.

Randle was the adopted son of the late A. E. Randle, who founded Congress Heights and developed Randle Highlands in Southeast Washington. At one time he was in the real estate business in Washington and built several apartment houses.

News in Brief of the Wartime Capital

Freshly washed shirts and other well starched laundry went up in flames when a two-alarm fire gutted the Eastern Laundry, 3418 Georgia Avenue Northwest, shortly after noon yesterday.

Fire officials estimated damage between $800 and $700 and Moy Hong Cheuck, owner, stated that more than 200 persons' wash was either burnt, charred or once again dirtied as a result of the fire.

The fire, which started in the drying room, was extinguished readily but still smoldering wash was dumped in the gutter in front of the building and thoroughly soaked by firemen, along with bits of debris shoveled out of the laundry.

Marsh, Van Duzer Named Safety Heads

Burton W. Marsh, director of the safety and traffic engineering department of the A. A. A., and W. A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic, have been named District safety leaders on the pedestrian and bicycle committee, street and highway traffic section, the National Safety Council.

The committee, it was announced yesterday, has been formed to study problems affecting pedestrians and bicyclists under new wartime traffic conditions and devise methods for reducing resultant accidents.

Ballou Indorses Girls Night Work

Superindent of Schools Frank W. Ballou yesterday sent the House District Committee conditional indorsement of proposed legislation to allow girls under 18 years of age to work during evening hours.

Ballous pointed out that a bill dropping the bar to teen-age evening employment would widen the opportunities open to the girls, but warned that some check on the closing hours of their jobs must still be maintained.

Victory Sidelights

Support of V-Man Campaign As War Aid Urged by Randolph

Public support of the V-Man Campaign was urged by Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, in a letter yesterday to Fred Nauheim, drive chairman.

The Junior Board of Commerce sponsors the campaign, which will present to the public each week a Washington resident who has given an unusual amount of time and effort to voluntary war work. Randolph asked the public to nominate V-men and said: "These nominations are the life-blood of the campaign, and we all owe it to our community, to our nation, and to those of our friends and neighbors who merit the nominations, to take time out to make this small contribution."

Servicewomen Speak at Luncheon

Women in uniforms of three services appeared before the Soroptimist Club at a luncheon in the Willard Hotel yesterday to explain the training programs and work of the WAVES, SPARS and WAAC.

Citing the need for more recruits, Lieut. (j.g.) Leila Stevens of the WAVES described the greater "emancipation" of women, who not only have taken over men's positions, but have the opportunity to replace men in service to their country. Other speakers were Ensign Mary C. Lyne of the SPARS and Lieut. Barbara Smith of the WAACS.

Victory Campaign Brings in 2500 Books

The local Victory Book Campaign received about 2500 books donated for men in the armed forces during the past week. These contributions bring total donations for the first month of the campaign to approximately 8000, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, chairman, announced yesterday.

Special group donations have also boosted the Washington total. Mentioned particularly by Mrs. Smith for their recent efforts in the 1943 campaign were the Washington Club, which has presented 165 books; the Federal OCD, more than 400; American Red Cross Committee State Chapter, D. A. R., 300, and the John Eaton School, 125.

Women's Work

After the peace and only then will the whole story of women's magnificent work in the aircraft industry be told. This is the belief of Richard C. Palmer, Washington representative of the Aircraft War Production Council of California, who recently returned from an inspection tour of aircraft factories in California.

Speaking before members of the Silver Spring Woman's Club yesterday at a monthly meeting held at Jesup Blair Community House, Palmer pointed out that approximately 50 per cent of airplane workers are women. "You see them in drafting rooms," he said, "and operating 2000-ton hydraulic presses. Knowing that errors in constructing combat planes cost lives, the women demonstrate extremely high quality and carefulness in workmanship."

SHOP AND RUN

By Marianne

When you get tired of politely listening to all kinds of advice from people who take a "maternal interest" in you, here is a baby booklet that will give you much valuable information. Although it's only 10 cents, there are many helpful suggestions, such as lists of clothes needed for baby's layette, guidance on taking care of baby and mother, and even includes several pages to help you answer the "what shall we call him" problem.

Here's the biggest reason we consider it such a find: The booklet contains a list of the most widely known books for mothers to read and also gives the names of Government agencies, such as the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, which offer publications—some free and some for a small amount, such as 5c to 25c. These cover a multitude of subjects, and, of course, are the result of the latest scientific research. If you're having a baby, this book will tell you how to be intelligent and independent about it.

The 1943 trading post is quite a change from the early ones when fur trappers and Indians did their bartering. But the general idea of the trading post is now in effect through the cooperation of the Potomac Electric Power Co., Home Service Department. It is called the Appliance Exchange.

This exchange gives women the opportunity to register any electrical appliances they may wish to exchange for others desired. The appliance must, of course, be in working order.

Of course, if you are offering an iron, you may be sure your offer will be gobbled up in a jiffy. If you have a toaster you don't need and would like to

There's no telling what other persons have that they don't need, and what they might like to obtain. That Wild Arnold Girl

By Irene Lounen Ernhart

The story thus far: Jenny Arnold is disgusted with her own weakness when she finds herself falling in love with Bill Winslow to whom her older sister, Madeline, is engaged. She can't get him out of her mind and yet she has many other things to think about, including the buying back of certain letters which her frivolous mother, Celia, indiscreetly sent to the oily young dancing master, Tony Torrento. Then, to complicate matters further, Perry Padwell, the handsome youth to whom Madeline was once secretly married returns to the city. Torrento comes to the Arnold home to demand money and Jennie gives him $100.

CHAPTER XVI

"Being so tired subdues your fire too," he said slyly as he started the car. "You look as if you needed someone to lean on. I'm glad I'm here."

"It's not you I need!" Jenny said.

"We'll go for a nice long drive before we have dinner. That'll make you feel better."

"I'm not having dinner with you, Perry, and I have to stop in at the El Toreador before 5 o'clock."

"Good, we have half an hour." He swung the car on to a country road.

Just as she had feared, Perry drove so far into the country that it was after 5 when they got back to the El Toreador and she missed Torrento after all. At home she ate a lonely dinner. Crick said her mother had gone up town to have dinner somewhere with her father and Madeline was somewhere with Bill.

At 7 Crick knocked on her bedroom door. "There's some foreign-looking man downstairs, Jenny, that says he has to see you."

"Oh, Crick!" Jenny gasped. She had been afraid Torrento might come to Juniper Hill. "Well — thanks — I'll be right down," she added nervously.

"What are you into, Jenny?" Crick said. "What's that man got to do with you and why did he ask if your mother or any of the rest of the family was home before he'd come in?"

"I can't tell you, Crick." Jenny went down toward the library resolutely.

Torrento smiled when she came in. She asked abruptly, "Did you bring the letters?" She hated the obvious admiration in the fellow's swarthy face.

"Yes, I have them." He took a small packet out of his pocket, laid it on the table, but when she reached for it his own hand went over it again.

"Where is the money?" he demanded coldly.

She opened her purse, fumbled for the bills held together with a narrow rubber band. He took it greedily. His dark eyes were wary as he began to count it.

Jenny nodded.

Torrento's expression hardened. He put his hand on the letters again, as if to take them back.

Jenny sprang forward. "But you said you'd give them to me!"

"Not yet, my dear."

Jenny felt all the gathered torment in her, all the worry of the last few weeks resolving itself into a burst of fury she could not control.

"But I'm going to have them!" she cried. "How could I be sure you'd give them to me after I'd paid it all, if you won't give them to me now?"

In the confusion, while she and Torrento struggled for the letters, neither had noticed the door opening.

"Jenny! What's going on here?" It was father's voice, arresting them both. Jenny instinctively put the letters down on the table behind her, keeping her hand over them.

Torrento had turned wan. His face was actually pasty as he stared at James Arnold.

"Who are you and what are you doing here?" father demanded.

"He came to see me about a—a private matter, father."

"Oh, I see. About the letters of which you spoke the other day." He looked from Jenny to Torrento. "Get out!" he said.

Torrento picked up his hat and glided toward the door. He was gone instantly, not even looking at Celia Arnold, who stood paralyzed by the door.

"Jenny," her father said, "You've disgraced the Arnold family. I hope this is a lesson to you."

"Why have I disgraced us?" Jenny faltered. "I got the letters back."

"I suppose you paid him. How much?"

"A—a hundred dollars," Jenny said. Tears streamed suddenly from her eyes and she could not stop them. She fumbled in her purse again, took out a clean handkerchief and began to dab at her eyes.

"And where did you get the hundred dollars?"

"It was my own money that I'd saved out of my allowance."

Father stared at her for a few moments in disgusted silence.

To Be Continued.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn

One of the characteristics of a master player is his fine attention to detail. Today's questions will give you a brief workout on this point.

1. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

♠ J8653
♡ Q875
♣ K Q 6

The bidding has gone:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

What is your opening lead?

2. Sitting South, as declarer with plenty of entries to both hands you hold this combination:

♠ A K 9 7 6 2
SOUTH
♣ Q 5 3

How do you play to have the maximum chance of taking every trick?

3. Sitting South as declarer with entries to either hand you hold this combination:

SOUTH
♣ A 10 5 3

How do you play to be sure of winning two tricks?

Answer to Quiz

1. Lead the fourth-best spade not the singleton diamond. Holding four trumps, many good players will lead their longest suit so as to force declarer.

2. South must cash the spade queen on the first round of the suit. Then, if he discovers that West holds all four outstanding spades, declarer can prevent him from winnings a trick by leading twice through his jack-ten. Playing the king on the first round is wrong, for if East holds the four spades nothing can be done about it, anyway, and if West has them it is then too late to prevent him from winning one trick.

3. South's proper play is to cash the ace and then lead a small spade toward dummy's jack. No matter what the adverse distribution may be, the opponents cannot take more than two tricks.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Should Girl Keep Her Promise to Wear Man's Bracelet Until He Returns From North Africa, When She Is Now Engaged to Another Man?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two months ago, I became engaged; and until now, my fiance and I have told no one except our families about our intentions. He plans to give me an engagement ring in the near future, although we will not be married until next August. At present, I am wearing a bracelet given to me by a boy in the service, who is now in North Africa. Although I am not in love with this boy and never have been, I promised him I would wear his bracelet until he returned. I have been writing to him quite often, too, in answer to letters I receive from him. He is the brother of my roommate at college and our friendship started through her. We had several dates before he went away.

This is my problem: The man I am going to marry knows the history of the bracelet, although he hasn't said much about it. And he has also seen the boy's name engraved on the back of the bracelet, because it is rather loose fitting. Would it be all right for me to continue to wear the bracelet after I receive the engagement ring? Or would I be doing wrong if I refused to stop wearing it, even if my fiance should ask me to? I promised the boy I would do this for him; and I believe in keeping a promise. Also, should I discontinue writing to this boy now? Or would it be all right to continue writing until I am married? This may seem a petty problem to you, but it has me worried and I would appreciate your advice. L. L. S.

Reverse the Problem And Find the Answer

DEAR L. L. S.: I believe you might get a clear picture of the personally profitable, as well as genuinely considerate, thing to do, if you were to try to imagine the problem in reverse. Suppose, for instance, that the man you are to marry had enjoyed a sentimental flirtation with another girl, before meeting you; and that the young lady had set sail for foreign parts some months ago (maybe in the Red Cross service); and had given this chap, as a farewell gift to keep sentiment alive, a wristwatch with her name engraved on the back; and had exacted from him a promise to wear it every day, until her return. And that every time you saw him, there was that wristwatch, ostentatiously on view. And suppose you knew, too, that he was writing to her regularly and often, as late as today, and hearing from her with equal frequency; and that, even so, he told you he didn't love her and never had; but felt honor-bound to maintain their friendship on the terms which existed when they parted, until she came back,—whether you liked it or not.

What would you think of that situation? And of him, for stubbornly making it stick? Wouldn't you think his behavior was definitely less than clean-cut? And that in some vague way, he was giving you reason to distrust his ability to forsake all other women for you? Wouldn't you think that he ought to have written the girl promptly, after getting engaged, to tell her that he had found his true love, and was to be married next August; and felt she had a right to be the first person to know, aside from your immediate families; and that out of respect for Laura's feelings, he thought it was time to call off that promise about wearing her wristwatch every day,—not that Laura had ever said anything about it, of course, but she knew its history;—and would she like to have him mail it back to her, or put it in mothballs until her return to the U. S. A.? Isn't that the kind of conduct you would buoyantly approve and profoundly respect (and secretly give thanks for), in the man you were planning to marry?

Discard the Bracelet In Loyalty to Fiance

In my opinion, that bracelet should have gone into the discard of outgrown frippery the very day you became engaged. Without saying one word about it to your fiance, you should have tucked it away to await final disposition and showed up for your next date minus that tactless reminder of another man's interest in you (and your inexplicable encouragement of him). Had you done so, undoubtedly your finance would have noted its absence, inferred a compliment, and been greatly pleased. He probably would have jokingly expressed some satisfaction at its disappearance and might have suggested giving you his choice of bracelet to take its place.

So my advice is to take off the bracelet after reading this comment; and then sit down and write a letter to the boy in North Africa, giving him the news of your engagement and explaining, apropos of the bracelet, that you are putting it away among your treasured souvenirs, "for the duration," as you feel you would be "sailing under false colors" if you continued to wear it, since being engaged to Bill; but that you will always be one of his warmest friends; and if he wants to keep up the correspondence, you will welcome his letters and continue to write, provided Bill doesn't mind. On that note, I think, you should begin immediately to taper off your contribution to the exchange; and should let your fiance know that you are doing so. If your attitude toward Bill is one hundred per cent loyal, the correspondence should have died a natural death well in advance of the wedding day. M. H.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

The covered-dish supper can be an answer to company meals when food rationing gets into swing. This is not a new idea but an old-time institution. Ladies of the quilting bees, Senate wives and many other organizations have employed this procedure to achieve glorious meals within a minimum of effort.

With each women putting her effort on one dish instead of an entire meal, it stands to reason that something extra-special will result. And it will be a way to keep the entertaining of friends in swing, yet each person will be using her own groceries.

If Elinor's culinary accomplishment is salad-making, Gwen's prize dish is lemon meringue tarts; Carolyn does divine appetizers; Patricia make extra-special chicken-vegetable pie: why not put them all together and have a feast?

The person who acts as hostess usually supplies the main dish, plus the beverage. But if she finds her coffee or tea supply will not stand the strain, she can ask the guests to bring their own, so she can make the brew. Dishes that can be carried to the place where the dinner is held, will have to be considered.

As a hypothetical case let's take five couples—either married or single—and plan a menu that is adaptable to this kind of get-together.

Supper Menu

Appetizers — Cocktails
Chicken-Vegetable Casserole
Tossed Salad — Rolls
Broccoli — Pickled Peaches
Lemon Tarts — Coffee

The chicken-vegetable casserole is a version of the chicken pie. In adding vegetables to the chicken pie, serving space, dishes and preparation is saved. You can add the vegetables you prefer, but carrots, potatoes and peas make a good addition to the chicken. Make this way:

CHICKEN-VEGETABLE PIE

Have two, 3-pound chickens disjointed as for frying; place in deep kettle. Add 2 medium-sized onions, sliced; 1 bay leaf, 2½ teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, and ½ cup diced celery. Cover with boiling water. Simmer 2 hours or until chicken is tender. Remove chicken, save broth. Remove meat from bones in large pieces. Place the meat in a large casserole. Strain broth; measure and thicken, using 1½ tablespoons flour for each cup of broth. Pour into casserole. Add 2 cups each of diced carrots, diced potatoes and 2 cups peas, all of which have been cooked to but early stage of doneness. They will continue cooking when the baking powder biscuits are placed on top and baked for 20 minutes. Make baking powder biscuits and arrange on top of the casserole. Bake in hot oven at 425 degrees for 20 minutes. Serves 10.

Cottage cheese, pepped up with chopped chives, makes apetizing dunking. Use potato chips for dunkers. Assortment of cheese and crackers, plus celery curls and ripe olives would be appropriate for this tray.

The piece-de-resistance, a chicken-vegetable casserole topped with baking powder biscuits, can be the offering of the hostess at a cooperative, covered-dish supper. It can go from the oven to the table.

Lemon tarts placed on lace doilies on a tray makes a dessert that is easy for the hostess to serve. These can be transplanted to better than a frozen or other quivering dessert.

The Gentler Sex

The War of Words . .

SLIPSHOD public speaking is becoming a definite handicap to the conduct of the war on the home front. On every hand is heard increasing irritation over time wasted in meetings where speakers either have nothing to say or can't say what they have to say in a clear and stimulating manner. The mumblers, the jumblers, the ramblers and the fuzzy-wuzzy thinkers seem to be having a field day at the expense of audiences whose time is as precious these days as ammunition. Small wonder the public is showing a tendency to turn aside from all addresses with a bored "More propaganda!"

This is most unfortunate since this war is so largely one of ideas and hence must be fought mightily with words. And the coming peace should afford even more discussion so that it may reflect the ideas of an informed public.

* * * *

WOMEN are being blamed for a great deal of this tiresome public chatter—possibly because they prevail in public meetings. But men speakers probably hold the wordage record. And they are the ones who in their posts on war boards and commissions have the chief responsibility for telling the people what it is all about. Occasionally they do this effectively—a few may even approach the mastery of Elmer Davis in making every word count—but too often they monotonously read their ghost written speeches or even worse, meander through those of their own, while the audience day dreams about its postwar gadgets. And yet we are out to beat Hitler's time table!

Women, of course, are long inured to long-winded, desultory speaking and to meetings that drag out to 5:30 o'clock when they are due to end at 3. But there is no time now for meetings with gavel passing and honor guests and certainly no time for the woman speaker, presiding officer or motion maker who hasn't something very definite to say and who can't say it in a few forceful words. No woman today should have the effrontery to stand before a time-pressed audience in the interest of war bonds, Red Cross, victory gardening, war relief, Congressional legislation or other cause without thorough — yes, and prayerful—study and without advance organization and rehearsal of what she is going to say.

* * * *

DOES that mean that all who speak in public should take speech training? Not necessarily, though it would seem they would at least seek some elementary instruction in that line. However, a too "cultivated" voice may repel interest by giving the impression the speaker is doing nothing but listening to his or her own golden tones. On the other hand, the speaker who tries to address an audience without any regard for the technique of making it hear and understand, and who without preparation rambles on in the hope of being "natural" is an actual menace now as a time waster.

Whence comes this colossal egotism that causes all of us to think we can "just get up and talk?" Why do we assume that by acquiring public posts we automatically become endowed with the power to speak well—or at least the right to bore the public? Is this attitude a part of our easy going American tolerance of mediocrity?"

* * * *

IF IT IS, we had better be mending our ways in a hurry. The battle of the peace stretches ahead—a battle that will be fought almost entirely with ideas and their symbols, words. The words of every citizen will count, whether spoken in conversation or on the platforms. We must learn to talk as well as to think if we are going to contribute anything to the making of a peace designed for an ongoing world. All the oratory of demagogery, reaction, prejudice, passion and self-seeking will be arrayed against such a peace. Such oratory can only be stemmed by those prepared to make words the valorous standard bearers of dynamic thought.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

The homemaker can market early in the morning and so gets the first chance at all the prime cuts of meat. The warworker who doubles as a homemaker is the one who has to take what is left. If the meat she is able to buy takes a long time to cook, that's just her tough luck.

She wants to put good meals down before her family, but she has neither the time nor the energy to turn the tough cuts into the kind of meat course the family will go for. So, if the homemaker who doesn't have any other job sincerely wants to be patriotic, she will order cuts that take longer to prepare and leave for the warworker the quick-cooking chops, chopped meats, minute steaks, liver, calves' brains, hamburger, frankfurters and sausage. At least she will not serve those meats as often as in normal times just to get out of work.

What are some of the good meats that can be turned out to a gourmet's taste? Try a kidney stew. Soak the kidneys for 30 minutes before cooking, then simmer for a couple of hours. You might like it seasoned with a little mace and allspice. Or, you might try your hand at a kidney and vegetable pie.

Your family probably likes stew and you might serve it more often. For a lamb stew, as you know, you have to allow one and one-half hours for boiling the meat, then add the vegetables. The warworker can't go to that bother very often.

Chuck and Swiss steaks are good meats but they also take too long for the woman who is holding down two jobs. They have to be on the fire for at least 1½ hours.

Meat pie is a dainty dish. And barbecued spare ribs, sweetbreads, fricassee of chicken and veal birds are all excellent—but they all take time to prepare and cook. Those are the meats the patriotic homemaker will use more and more.

It is a time and trouble saver for the warworker to cook a roast on Sunday or whatever day she is off, and serve it in various ways over the next few days—it makes a good meat pie or hash. It can be chipped in gravy and served on toast, biscuits or rice.

For a change from the quick-cooking meats, she can have fish. It takes comparatively little time.

Changing the family's ideas of what meat is good may not be easy. But war jolts us out of most of our routines and makes us appreciate a lot of things we are not used to—even different kinds of meats.

Petition Asks Padlocking Of D. C. Hotel

Padlock proceedings to extend one year against the Atlantic Hotel, Thirteenth and I Streets Northwest, a 31-room hostelry, were instituted in District Court yesterday as a result of Tuesday's conviction of its proprietor, Kachig Harry, of running a disorderly house.

Assistant United States District Attorney Bernard Margolius, who filed the suit, said yesterday the proceedings were instituted only after the Government had given full consideration to the housing shortage in Washington.

In addition to asking the court to padlock the hotel the petition also requested that Harry and three of his employes be enjoined from maintaining a nuisance for one year. The others named were: Frank W. Ferris, 54, convicted with Harry of operating a disorderly house, and Thomas and Carl Hawkins, Negroes, convicted last week of pandering and procuring.

2 Officers From D.C. Area Decorated

Two officers from this area were cited for meritorious service in action with our armed forces, it was announced yesterday.

McIntyre

First Lieut. Jack C. McIntyre, 28, U. S. Army of 3538 A Street Southeast, was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for "extraordinary achievement" against the Japanese in the Southwest Pacific. The citation gave him credit for 50 flying missions through heavy enemy anti-aircraft fire, including destruction of enemy planes on two of the missions.

The son of Mrs. Bertha C. McIntyre, a clerk with the Civil Service Commission, Lieutenant McIntyre was born in Jackson, Miss. He attended Sewanee Military Academy and the University of Mississippi. He enlisted as a bombardier in March, 1941 and was commissioned December 6, 1941. His mother said yesterday he had been awarded the Silver Star, January 12 and has been promoted to the rank of captain.

Lieut. Comdr. James M. Robinson, 39 of 102 Commonwealth Avenue, Alexandria, Va., was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious service as a fleet gunnery officer before and after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Commander Robinson, a native Washingtonian, is a graduate of McKinley High School. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1921 and later attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

'Master Plan' For Child Care Nearly Ready

A 35-page "master plan" for 10 public nursery schools, foster day homes and before-and-after-school care for children of mothers engaged in war work will be ready for submission to the Commissioners tomorrow or Saturday, Mrs. Henry P. Chandler, chairman of the Child Care and Protection Committee of the Civilian Mobilization Division, said yesterday.

The program which provides for new wartime child care 12 hours a day, six days a week throughout the year, was held up earlier this week by lack of typists and heat in the office of its newly appointed director, Miss Dorothy Pearse.

Already approved by the Superintendent of Schools, Director of Public Welfare, District Health officer and Superintendent of Recreation—who make up an advisory committee representing the agencies which will administer the program—the project will go from the Commissioners to Federal Works Agency for final approval and funds.

A project for a nursery school at Fourth and D Streets Southeast, submitted to FWA several weeks ago along with an administrative chart for operation of the program, has passed legal, financial and technical hurdles and has been forwarded in the central office, Miss Izetta Jewel Miller, FWA official, said.

Lawyer Asks Jury to Treat Flynn Fairly

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 3.—Errol Flynn's counsel charged today that the actor's two accusers were motivated by a desire to escape prosecution for illegal acts of their own.

"Betty Hansen testified here that she had admitted before the grand jury acts of sex perversion upon a man in the presence of another man in a hotel room," Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler said.

"She knew it was a crime for which she could be punished, and she had hopes of not being prosecuted.

"Peggy Satterlee, when she was taken into protective custody last October—and since then pampered, petted and coddled—knew she had participated in a criminal act," the attorney continued, alluding to the prosecution's stipulation during the trial that Miss Saterlee had undergone an abortion in the summer of 1942.

"Additionally, she had at heart the protection of a man equally involved who could be prosecuted two ways—for abortion and rape," Giesler went on.

Miss Hansen's "Absurdity"

Giesler ridiculed what he called the "absurdity" of Miss Hansen's testimony that she thought Flynn was merely undressing her to put her to bed because she was ill.

He also asked:

"Do you think this defendant has to take a young woman of that kind if he wants to perform or engage in acts of intercourse "

Flynn sat quietly at the counsel table, again wearing his black, pinstriped suit, calmly surveying the table or occasionally biting his lip.

Giesler said there were the following discrepancies in Miss Hansen's testimony:

Policewoman's Version

In court she testified that her slacks and other clothing were removed by Flynn, Giesler went on. But in a previous statement to authorities at Juvenile Hall, he declared, she said she undressed herself.

At the trial, Betty said the alleged act occured on a twin bed in an alcove adoining the "blue bedroom." But a policewoman testified that at Juvenile Hall the girl said it happened on a large double bed in the bedroom itself.

In court Betty was asked if she recalled saying "It's easy to get money in a sucker town," and she said she did not. But the policewoman testified that Betty had said just that at Juvenile Hall, Giesler pointed out.

Appealing for his client's acquittal, Giesler demanded that Flynn be accorded the same sort of justice to which the less famous are entitled.

Giesler thus echoed the sentiments, in his final argument, voiced the previous day by Deputy Attorney Thomas Cochran who had asked:

"Why should there be any different law for Errol Flynn than for the humble man down on main street, if he committed the crime of statutory rape?"

Geisler will resume his closing argument tomorrow. The case is expected to go to the jury Friday.

Bankhead Urges Military to Free Farm Workers

By the Associated Press

Chairman Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, of a Senate committee investigating manpower facilities, asserted yesterday that nearly one million farm workers now in the Army and Navy must be released to forestall an acute food shortage.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, was questioned by the committee at a 2½-hour closed session.

While refusing to discuss Hershey's testimony, Bankhead asserted that because of the military drain on farm labor "we now have a real food scarcity, which is becoming worse."

"Any enlargement of the armed forces," he added, "will cause us to fall far short of supplying the military, lend-lease and ourselves with adequate amounts."

Kaiser Denied Ban on Hearing Of Labor Board

Portland Oreg., Feb. 3 (AP).—Federal Judge James A. Fee declined today to grant an injunction to halt the National Labor Relations Board hearing of C. I. O. charges against the Henry J. Kaiser shipyards.

The C. I. O. charges that the shipyards made illegal closed shop contracts with A. F. L. unions. The Kaisers asked Judge Fee to enjoin the Labor Board on the grounds that two members were prejudiced and prejudged the case.

Judge Fee dismissed the injunction plea because he lacked jurisdiction.

The Labor Board hearing is in its fourth week.

Commenting on the Kaiser accusation that two members of the Labor Board were prejudiced Judge Fee said that "simply because a judge of a court has taken a firm position upon a question of law or fact in the early stages of a case does not constitute a ground for challenge of his impartiality at trial."

The Kaisers, he said, have nothing to fear from the NLRB decision in itself, but only from the enforcement of the decision which must come on order of the Circuit Court of Appeals. Their recourse is in that tribunal at that time.

The judge also remarked that because the rights of the individual workers are sometimes submerged in these "battles between giants in . . . economic fields," there is always danger of a "slowdown." "There is no way," he continued, "legally by action of administrative board or court or otherwise to protect against a 'slowdown,' even in a vital war effort."

Kaiser contentions that the NLRB hearing with its threat of disruption of existing union agreements would produce chaos in the yards and serious loss of war production were described as "illusory."

"The people who are making sacrifices and giving boys and girls to the armed services will take retribution of those who frustrate this idealism by internecine civil strife, to the detriment of the effort to prosecute the war," the decision continued. "The history of labor in this State is proof . . . that public opinion does control all factions."

Rogers Expects Doorkeeper Job

Friends of Will Rogers, former Congressman from Oklahoma, predicted yesterday that he would be selected as House doorkeeper at a Democratic caucus today.

Joseph J. Sinnott, Virginian, who was doorkeeper, died last week. Rogers, whose position as Oklahoma Representative-at-large was abolished as a result of the 1940 census, is one of five candidates for doorkeeper. Among them is Alfred Beiter of New York, Democrat, defeated for reelection to the House. The job pays $6000 a year.

White House Dispensary Opens Quinine Drive With First Gift

First dribble into the national quinine pool, designed to supply the vital malaria preventative to the armed forces, came yesterday from Lieut. George A. Fox, Navy Hospital Corps, in charge of the White House dispensary.

Lieutenant Fox made his contribution, which officially opened the drive for quinine, to Robert W. Rodman, editor of the American Pharmaceutical Association Journal, at the White House. The association is handling the drive under the direction of the War Production Board and the Defense Supplies Corp.

The drive for quinine now will be carried to every druggist and dispensary in every State where malaria is not prevalent. Quinine had been frozen except for use as a preventative of malaria shortly after the war began and the association hopes that the drive will bring in some 100,000 ounces of the precious medicine.

Importance of the drug made from cinchona bark, which was formerly obtained in Japanese Java and Malay, has been heightened by the extension of the fighting fronts to such malerial hotbeds as North Africa, Guadalcanal and New Guinea. Lieutenant Fox was able to stress the importance of his own donation, for he has just returned from North Africa with the President.

Mrs. Dashiell To Sponsor Ship

Mrs. Robert Brooke Dashiell of Annapolis, Md., widow of Lieut. Robert Brooke Dashiell, will sponsor a new destroyer named after her husband at the Federal Shipbuilding Yards in Kearny, N. J., it was announced yesterday.

Lieutenant Dashiell was the inventor of the first rapid fire gun to be used by the Navy, and a noted naval construction engineer. He died in 1899. Senator Tydings suggested to Secretary Knox that the destroyer be named after Dashiell.

A Story of Old New Orleans Is Honor Guest at Tea

Post Profile — Mrs. Cass Canfield

Head of New Red Cross Unit Is Ideal Choice

When Mrs. Dwight Davis, Dorothy Liebes and the Red Cross chose the chairman for their exciting new unit of Arts and Skills, they chose well. Mrs. Cass Canfield, their choice, is not only an outstanding American sculptress but a keen and practical executive.

The new enterprise, functioning under the Red Cross Hospital and Recreation Corps, was the "brain child" of that fabulous and internationally known textile designer Dorothy Liebes. Purpose of the new unit, which is in its formative stages, is to enlist the voluntary aid of skilled artists to teach crafts to the wounded in the Army and Navy hospitals, under Red Cross direction. In this way the long-term hospital patients shall have available to them outstanding instructors in every known craft.

There is no limit to the skills that will be taught: leather work, wood carving and fly tying, are merely some of them, to say nothing of the more complex arts: sculpture, painting and weaving. "We hope the skills will include typewriting and photography later on," explained practical Mrs. Canfield. "It is also hoped that the articles made will be of a high enough standard to be salable. Consultants from New York stores have advised us on articles that could be made which would have market value."

Three Hospitals Pattern for Future

The Arts and Skills Unit is a natural outgrowth of two gathering forces—the need of the Military and Naval hospitals for the help of skilled artists to teach the many wounded now in their wards, and the desire of the artists and museums to be of direct use in the war. Dorothy Wright Liebes, textile designer of San Francisco, became the focal point of the two motivating forces. She approached Mrs. Dwight Davis of the Red Cross, who had the imagination and sagacity to see the importance and need for such an activity. Thus, through the medium of the Red Cross, and with its financial and material aid, this work has entered the military hospitals. It was a great stroke of fortune that enabled them to secure Mrs. Canfield as chairman.

Working now with three New York hospitals as a pattern for future activity, Mrs. Canfield hopes soon to start work in Washington. Those New York hospitals which now have the benefit of this new unit are the U. S. Naval Hospital, Halloran General Hospital on Staten Island and the U. S. Army Station Hospital at Fort Jay on Governor's Island. Work is also being done in Letterman Hospital, San Francisco.

Widely Known As Jane Sage

In the important lining up and selection of artists, the Museum of Modern Art and the Brooklyn Museum have been of great help. "We hope to have the advice and aid of the art centers throughout the country," said Mrs. Canfield. "New York is to be the blueprint for future activities and expansion."

Under her professional name, Jane Sage, poised and beauteous Mrs. Canfield is a well known sculptress. Wife of the former president of Harper's Magazine, now Chief of the Blockade and Supply Division of the Board of Economic Warfare, she leads and active and exciting life. In the last war she taught occupational therapy. Her talents thrust her into the artistic world from that period on. Now, with very little time in which to pursue her career as a sculpturess, she has plunged into her full-time war job and is fascinated with it. Ably assisted by Vice Chairman Mrs. Artemis Gates, she spends all of her time working out the practical operational plan of this new Red Cross unit.

Skills to Provide Mental Stimulus

The arts and skills unit will lend excitment and dash to the Army and Navy hospitals. There will be no uniforms. Workers will wear smocks of bright and original colors.

"We are not attempting to be therapeutic," explained Mrs. Canfield, who is persuasive, quiet, and possessed of enormous personal charm. "But naturally we hope that our work will be therapeutic in its results. Also, if a craftsman should have some knowledge of therapy so much the better, but the actual field of occupational therapy is for others. Our immediate function is to provide the particular skill which will give mental stimulus to the particular patient. By enlisting the aid of well-known and trained artists in all fields we hope to raise the standard of work and to develop future vocations for the wounded upon their recovery."

Mrs. Keyes and Book Share Honors at Tea

"Crescent Carnival," a tale of old New Orleans, has won second place on best-seller lists, and so to celebrate its success and to honor its author, Frances Parkinson Keyes, Clarence Hewes entertained at tea yesterday afternoon at his home on Massachusetts Avenue.

It was from a suggestion by Mr. Hewes that Mrs. Keyes was inspired to go to this fascinating city to do research for a book. She spent several months there, was completely charmed with all she saw and learned and has turned out one of the best in more than a dozen books of which she is author. Recently returned to Tradition, her home in Alexandria, Mrs. Keyes is already at work on the outline of another book.

The host yesterday had assisting him in receiving his sisters—Mrs. Robert E. Flowerree and Mrs. Arthur Breese Griswold—visitors here from New Orleans. 'Only by Understanding the Nazi Mind Can We Anticipate Its Moves and Defeat Hitler,' Says Stefan Heym, German-Born Author Whose Best-Seller Is a Study of Vengeance in Advance

He was a "hair shirt" to Hitler and his henchmen as far back as 1933 . . . but for the past few years he has been a force of anti-Nazi influence on German people in this country, and around the world.

He is convinced that the winners in this war "will be those who have conquered fear by knowing exactly what they are fighting for—not those who take vengeance in advance."

He knows the Nazi mind, as only a person who had escaped from its vengeance could . . . and as only a man who came close enough to death that he is no longer afraid of it.

And he has written into one book—a best-seller entitled "Hostages"—his theories, observations and convictions on the Nazi system; and has won wide acclaim not only as a successful writer, but also as the author of the first book of fiction written in English, by a German-born author. "It's not a translation, you know," he said, with a glow of pride in his blue eyes.

I'm speaking, of course, of 29-year-old Stefan Heym, who fled from his native Germany back in the early days of the war, went across the border to Czecho-Slovakia and continued wielding his powerful pen against the Nazis there until the day when he got the break of his life and sailed for America to make a new life for himself.

Feted at Legation Tea

Another chapter in that new life was written yesterday when Heym was guest of honor at a tea given by Mme. Vladimir Hurban, wife of the Czecho-Slovak Minister, at the Czecho-Slovak Legation. Since cards to that fete went out a few days ago many of those invited took time out to read "Hostages" and certainly anybody who hadn't, would—after meeting the personable young author.

In a brief interview a few hours ahead of the party, Heym (who, incidentally, looks something like a younger and much handsomer edition of Edward Arnold, the actor), told me something of his experiences in escaping from the Nazis; how he made his way to Prague to continue his anti-Nazi activities; how he happened to come to America and to write "Hostages," and just a few of his plans for the future. Incidentally, he revealed that Hitler had interfered with his career in two countries besides Germany, and that it had been a source of great satisfaction that he had later had the opportunity to edit an anti-Nazi newspaper that proved to be a potent force in influencing countless German-born people against the Nazi system.

As he put it, " 'Hostages' was written with the end in view of presenting a few main ideas." Among those he mentioned: "I wanted to show the working of the Nazi mind; because I believe that if we know what makes the Nazis tick, we can anticipate their every move. . . . I wanted to indicate that the underground fight in Germany today is a growing force, growing stronger every day. . . . I wanted to present some of the personalities who are waging that underground war. The characters in my book are not types—they are real people. . . . I wanted to show how a group of people react in the face of death; to prove that the problem of fear is one of the motivating forces in this life; to indicate that only when a people realize they lose all, unless that fear is conquered, can they defeat a people who invariably take vengeance ahead of time—because they are afraid."

His Poetry Provoked Hitler

In Berlin back in 1933, Heym's poetry—definitely anti-Nazi in tone—aroused the ire of Hitler's agents. But by the time orders went out for the author's arrest he was safely across the border in Czecho-Slovakia. His father, however, was taken as a hostage; kept in jail for many months; cruelly treated, as would be expected, and while he was later released, he never recovered from the horrible experience.

Heym, meanwhile, had continued his writing in Prague, and had conceived the idea that if it were possible for him to get to America, that would be his next step. The opportunity came in 1935. He applied for a scholarship at the University of Chicago; got it; earned his master's degree in Germanic languages there in 1936; then did "all sorts of odd jobs," as he put it, in order to make a living, and finally headed for New York, where he edited an anti-Nazi newspaper "as long as possible on a capital of a mere $800."

His book "Hostages" was sold to a publisher on the basis of two complete chapters and an outline. It was bought by a motion picture company when only six chapters had been finished. Production on it will start shortly.

Hopes to Join U. S. Army Soon

Literary success sits lightly on Heym's broad shoulders, however, for it is not new to him. His dramatization of "Tom Sawyer" gathered all sorts of laurels for him back in Europe a number of years ago . . . but Hitler's march on two countries—Austria and Czecho-Slovakia—interrupted its presentation both in Prague and Vienna.

Plans for the future? "Well, I'm working on a book that should be finished within four weeks," Heym said. "It is a completely American book. In fact, it's about a smart woman who wins a seat in Congress."

Meanwhile, Heym's visit to Washington is being made for another reason. He's going into the Army next month and conferences at the War Department are filling most of his current calendar.

John F. Williams—

National Guard Head Is Former Newspaperman

This is another in a series of stories about the men who are running the war.

By Patricia Grady

"The sun never sets on the National Guard these days."

Maj. Gen. John Francis Williams, Chief of the National Guard Bureau, speaks with pride of Guard-trained men who are now taking their orders direct from Uncle Sam. This burly, plain-spoken officer is probably the only general in the Army whose work is diminishing as the war goes on.

The thousands of Guard officers and men were incorporated into the Army proper in 1940 and General Williams has been devoting his time to clearing up property and organizational problems that developed out of the new set-up. Today those problems are largely settled and the general's desk is covered with papers relating to State Guard matters.

Although it is no longer a unit, there is still a very real "esprit de corps" among the men who entered the Army via the National Guard. Records are kept in General Williams' office of their activities, promotions, decorations. It is not that the Guard has only a sentimental interest in its former members. With its records up to date it can make plans for reconstitution of the Guard after the war.

"Considering the restrictions it is working under, the press is doing an excellent job of reporting the war," says former newspaperman Williams. "It is showing intelligence and integrity."

Was Editor of Missouri Paper

This big, white-haired general, with the forthright manner, has a man-to-man relationship with the press that stems from his days as editor of the Joplin News Herald. Genial, interested in people, he is more of an interviewer than an interviewee. He likes to talk journalistic shop and still feels himself close to the profession he gave up to go on active duty with the Army.

Pictures of his predecessors line the walls of General Williams' comfortable office in Temporary M. He has added a portrait of General MacArthur. General Williams looks like a man who should smoke a pipe, and does. He leaves the family golfing honors to his wife, who used to win silver cups in Missouri, and concentrates on fishing and hunting. During the past two years he hasn't had much time for his reels and guns. He has been doing a lot of traveling—by plane to Alaska, Puerto Rico and other Guard headquarter spots, and by motor to the dozens of Guard installations of the States.

The Williams family is definitely in the war effort. The general's two stepsons are both on Army duty overseas and his daughter, Betty, is working for the British Mission here. His other daughter, Mrs. James Monroe Clark, lives with her husband and baby daughter in Pittsburgh.

Started Career As Private

General Williams was born in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., the son of a National Guard officer father and a Welsh mother. He joined the Missouri National Guard as a private during his school years and went on to the University of Missouri's famed School of Journalism. He started out his journalistic career as mining editor of the Joplin Globe. From there he went to the Joplin News Herald as a reporter and worked his way up to editor.

In March, 1917, General Williams reenlisted in the Guard as a private and a week later was appointed first lieutenant of Infantry. He was soon overseas with the A. E. F. and served for a period of eight months in the Vosges sector, in the campaign of St. Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne and Sommedieu and in the Verdun sector. After graduating from the Army School of the Line at Langres, he was transferred to G-4 of the G. H. Q. staff in Paris for duty in connection with the Inter-Allied Games and the Peace Conference. At that time he was reporting various aspects of these activities for the Paris editions of the New York Herald and Chicago Tribune and for the London Times. While in France, he was a delegate to the initial conference of the American Legion held in Paris and has since kept up his interest in the Legion. In 1921, he was commander of the Legion for Missouri.

MAJ. GEN. WILLIAMS

With his rising career in the National Guard came General Williams' rising editorial career. In 1922 he became university publisher of the University of Missouri and when he left the campus in 1936 he was director of publications. In that year, the then-Colonel Williams came to Washington as a National Guard officer on active duty with the War Department, as a member of the National Guard Bureau. Then in January of 1940 he pinned two stars on each shoulder and took the oath of office as Chief of the National Guard Bureau.

Transit Firms Here Held War Industries
. . . "the essentiality to the defense effort of the services rendered by the Capital Transit Co. can scarcely be disputed. Without transportation of Government war workers to and from their jobs, the entire defense program would be seriously hampered. This has become especially true since the rationing of tires and gasoline."
From an opinion by the office of the General Counsel of the War Manpower Commission.
